

THE SILVA METHOD OF MIND MASTERY

by Dr. Tag Powell
with Judith L. Powell

THE SILVA METHOD OF MIND MASTERY

by Dr. Tag Powell
with Dr. Judith L. Powell

Top Of The Mountain Publishing
Largo, Florida USA

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or byany means, electronic or mechanical, including photography, recording on any information storage and retrieval system, without written permission form the author, except for inclusion of brief quotations in a review.

The Silva Method of Mind Mastery
Copyright 1988 Dr. Tag Powell

Much of this material was taken directly from Mega Mind, The Silva Mind Mastery and Silva Master Mind Seminar Training Manuals
Copyrighted 1983, 1984, 1985, 1987 Dr. Tag Powell

The Silva Method is a Trademark of Jose' Silva
Copyright 1969 Jose' Silva
Mental Training Exercise used with permission of Silva Method of Mind Development International
Copyright 1969 Jose Silva

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Powell, Tag.
The Silva method of mind mastery.

Bibliography: p.
1. Silva Mind Control. I. Powell, Judith l.,
II. Title.
Bf1141.P67 1988 158'.1 88-12344
ISBN 0-914295-70-5
ISBN 0-914295-71-3 (pbk.)

2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 95 94 93 92 91 90 89

Top of the Mountain Publishing
11701 Belcher Road, So., Suite 123
Largo, Florida 34643 USA
SAN 287-590X
(813) 530-0110

Dedicated to the expansion of human potential everywhere.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We wish to thank the many people who have helped "The Silva Method of Mind Mastery Seminars" evolve, including: Leslie Bodtke, George Maycock, Betty Perry, Dr. George De Sau, Charles and Mariann Ell, Philip Miele, Ken Coscia, K. Paul Grivas, and Jim and Dolores Keys.

Also, Hans DeJong, Jim Campbell, Tony Lopez, Wanda Morris, Tony Grech, Roy and Marie Proctor, Jim Clark, Ed and Maryann Reese, Dr. Gordan Bower, Ed Bernd, Jr., Dr. Albert Ellis, Susan Strasberg, Dick Sutphen, G. Harry Stine, Al Cooper, and Melvin Powers.

And of course, Jose' Silva and the entire Silva Family.

In order to help you, the reader, comprehend and read more quickly, you will note that we have used the plural "they," even when we are referring to a "singular" person. In this manner, you will not get boughed down with "he or she"; "him or her" statements.

OPTIMAL READING

Type-style, column width, and line spacing have been tested at the Speed Reading Institute, and have proven to be the most effective for optimal reading speed and comprehension.

BOOKS AND TAPES BY DR. TAG POWELL

Money and You Audiocassette Kit
Instant Money Audiocassette Kit
Speed Learning Audiocassette Kit
How to Start and Run a Graduate Group Booklet
The Fast, Easy Way to Remember Names and Faces
Money and You
As You Thinketh
Mega Mind Power
Silva Mind Mastery Seminar Audiocassette Series
Silva Master Keys To Success Audiocassette Series

AUDIOCASSETTES BY DR. JUDITH L. POWELL

Discover Your Perfect Mate Audiocassette Kit
Color Dynamics Audiocassette Kit
Inner Power Audiocassette Kit
Successful Living Series Audiocassettes

TABLE OF CONTENTS

MASTER SECRETS TO OPEN COMMUNICATION
Page 11

Get the Listener to Relax, Master Secrets Phase One, Physical Matching, Leading and Building Rapport, Tower of Babble, Billion-Dollar Turnover, Family Break-Up, Master Secrets Phase Two, Secret Language of Verbal Communication,Verbal Matching, Master Secrets Phase Three, Special Verbal Matching, VAK Clue Words, VAK Test, Three Major Keys to Verbal Communication: Visual/Auditory/Kinesthetic, Primary Modes of Friends and Relatives, Salesperson/Buyerperson Dialogue Test, VAK Test.

MASTER SECRETS TO TELL HOW ANOTHER IS THINKING
Page 51

Master Secrets Phase Four, Visual Clues, Recall Questions, Construct Questions, Testing is Important, Auditory Clues, Kinesthetic Clues, Liars are Left, Summary, Example Questions (with graphics).

STRESS AND RELAXATION
Page 77

Major Stress Factors, Warning Signs, Stress Scale, Neutralize Stress, Alpha Brainwave, Instant Stress and Relaxation Controls, Instant Relaxation Technique: The Thumbnail Technique, Instant Stress Control: The Thumb Stroke Technique, How Soon Should You Expect Results? How Often Should You Practice? The Basic Relaxation Exercise.

MENTAL DATA PROCESSING AND HOLOGRAPHIC VISUALIZATION
Page 101

Holographic Brain, Holographic Visualization, Artists and Visualization, True Cause for Success or Failure, What is a Program? Comfort Zones, "Reel Experience," Powers of Repetition, Quality of Input, Visual Observation, Auditory Observation, Kinesthetic Observation, Holographic Entering of Data, Visual Input, Auditory Input, Kinesthetic Input, Holographic Innergization, Summary.

INSTANT ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT
Page 133

Attitude Affects the Master Script, How to Correct a Negative Tape, Understanding Depression and Rejection, New Breakthrough in Mental Processing, Bower Research, Why Positive Mental Attitude Works, Controlling Mood Swings in Sales, Secret of Instant Attitude Adjustment, Defeat Depression, Summary, Triggers for Major Areas' Form, Verbal Trigger Success Form.

MAGIC TRIGGERS OF THE MIND
Page157

The Secret of Lucky Charms, The Money Drawing Candle, The Lucky Suit, What is a Trigger Mechanism? Controls at Your Fingertips, Self-Defeating Triggers, The Secret of Successful Triggers: Desire/Belief/and Expectancy, Last Step, Construction, Success Log.

ALPHA TIME MANAGEMENT
Page 175

Alpha Speed Reading, Alpha Time Manager's Mental Planner: Morning Program/Afternoon Program/Evening Program, Dynamic Management Tool: Pad and Points Program for Employee, The Boss, Improve Correspondence, Decision Making, Sample Pad and Points Program, Pad and Points Program Form.

SUCCESS DESTINATION SECRETS OF GOAL SETTING
Page 193

Secrets of Goal Setting, Tricking the Inner Conscious, Goal Setting Guidelines: Listing/Warning Flags/Priorities/Time Frames, Set Goal Order, Seven Secrets of Success in Goal Setting, Goal Setting Form, Summary.

SPECIAL RESEARCH PROJECT

SUBJECTIVE PROGRAMMING
Page 215

J.B. Rhine's Research, Remote Viewing Research, Remote Viewing Experiment, PSI and Profit in the Silver Market, PSI and Dreams, Critics and Frauds, The Power of News, Biased Reporting, PSI-COPS Caught in Fraud, PSI and Religion, PSI and Big Business, Subjective Programming Technique, Rip-Off the World? How Fast Does it Work? Mental Advertising, Mental Persuasion Ideas.

ALPHA BOARDROOM AND CREATIVE PROBLEM SOLVING
Page 239

Problem or Soap Opera? Alpha Boardroom Technique, Decision Making with Ben Franklin, The Ben Alpha, Summary.

MASTER SECRETS TO OPEN COMMUNICATION

THE SILVA METHOD OF MIND MASTERY

MASTER SECRETS TO OPEN COMMUNICATION

Have you ever noticed how some people always get the attention of others, while others are ignored? Some people can sell an idea or a product to anyone, while others can't even give away a twenty-dollar bill.

There are those who have the knack of starting squabbles and arguments; and others, some of whom receive high fees, mediate and settle disagreements: quickly bringing together two opposing parties.

What are the master secrets to communication? By applying the following Techniques, you can significantly improve your skills of persuasion: your people skills.

A good starting point is to examine the individual's personal world. Each person is wrapped up in a world which they have created. They feel they know how things are, they think they have a grasp on how to best handle most situations: right or wrong, good or bad, it's their world.

It's as if they have a bubble surrounding them, that filters out any data conflicting with their reality: a comfort zone.

Now you come along, in your own bubble and your own reality, and want to tell them how things are. Why should they listen? Well, there are many good reasons, but in their world, they believe that they are the expert.

Everything they hear is automatically compared with what they know. In this process of analysis, the information is forced into preconceived slots, and, very often, it is misinterpreted to fit the belief structure of the listener.

The secret is to first get through their bubble: to command the attention of the person with whom you wish to communicate.

THE FIRST STEP: GET THE LISTENER TO RELAX

The "show me" attitude is displayed by a person who would be threatened by something you might say with which they do not agree. Hence, they may shut you out before you start: their defenses are up. You must find a way to relax their defenses. There are master keys you can learn to open the door of that closed mind. We will explore ways to open the golden flow of communication.

The American Indians have an expression which will help to open a closed door. Oh yes, you have heard it before: "Walk a mile in my moccasins," which means to go outside yourself, and look at life from another's viewpoint. You need to mentally enter their bubble, and find the key to their particular lock.

How often have you had a thought that you really believed could help someone, and received only their blank stare after you made the suggestion? We are often so excited with what we want to say, we forget that communication is a two-way street. We try to push and shove our ideas into a closed mind.

Mentally step back, and observe the person with whom you are talking. How are they receiving your ideas? What body language are they exhibiting? How are they sitting or standing? Are they physically open or closed to you and your ideas?

Although we will not go into the different meanings of body posture, there have been many, fine books written about it (a list of recommended books is in the "Bibliography" Section of this book). Here we will look at body language in a different light. Our approach gives you one, simple technique relating to body language, which is extremely powerful.

MASTER SECRETS TO IMPROVE COMMUNICATION

PHASE ONE

In watching the super successful negotiators, mediators, and powerful communicators, you will see something special about their body posture. One of their little-known secrets to open communication is the matching of body language.

PROBLEM: You threaten their bubble
SOLUTION: Become non-threatening; cause the listener to relax
TECHNIQUE: Physical matching

As an effective communicator, you will choose to stand or sit in the same position as the person with whom you are talking. If that person is sitting with their legs crossed and arms folded, then you will sit in that same position. As the listener changes position, you slowly change your position. Psychologists have found matching to be a valuable tool in getting a patient to open up. Use this Technique, and you will be amazed with the results.

In most cases, the person will not notice that you are mimicking their stance; that is, at least not at the outer conscious level. However, at the inner conscious level, they will see a mirror image of themselves. They are comfortable with themselves, and since you look like them (in your body position at least), you are non-threatening: they become comfortable with you. At this point they start to relax, the barriers come down, and communication begins to flow.

You can learn to take "physical matching" to the degree of a master communicator, by studying and matching through practice, drill, and rehearse (PDR).

I. PHYSICAL MATCHING

A. Body posture
   1. Sitting or standing
   2. Position of arms, hands, legs, and feet
   3. Position of head

B. Gestures
   1. Hand movements
   2. Arm movements
   3. Head movements
   4. Body movements

C. Breathing
   1. Fast or slow
   2. Upper, middle, or lower chest

D. Voice
   1. Tempo
      a. fast or slow
   2. Tonality
      a. high or low

E. Facial mannerisms
   1. Eye blinking

2. Expression
    a. smile: mouth opened or closed
    b. scowl or frown

LEADING AND BUILDING RAPPORT

Once this rapport has been established, you may take the lead; that is, change the mood of the person, when necessary. If they are excited, for example, match their rapid breathing. Note if their eyes are blinking rapidly, then match the eye movements. Pattern your breathing, eye blinking, and/or any other physical signs, after that person. Build rapport and become like them, then take the lead by slowly decreasing the breathing and eye-blinking pace until they are in a relaxed mode. You will notice the individual following along and matching you—and they won't even realize it—it's done on an inner conscious level. This Technique can be extremely helpful during an emergency or stressful situation.

What other moods might you like to change or alter in another individual? Start a list (depression, anger, fear, etc.).

COMMUNICATION IS THE MODERN TOWER OF BABBLE

Communication seems to be the biggest problem in today's world.

In our travels across the world, we find people trying to force their language on others. Have you ever noticed how Americans, when visiting a foreign country, will walk up to a native and start speaking English, and expect that person to respond in English? The amazing thing is, that most often, they do respond in English. It is fantastic how far we have gotten in this world with forced communication. Although this will work, be aware that it is not the best form of communication.

To effectively communicate with a French person, we must speak French, for French is how they process data. To speak another language would require the individual to mentally translate: from French to English, to French; then to understand what you said; and then to repeat the process in order to respond in your language. You can begin to see why communication on this planet is a real problem.

The same communication problem exists in our country. Each person wants to be a specialist.

Everyone talks a different language: doctors speak one language; lawyers another; youths have their own language; as do the senior citizens.

THE BILLION-DOLLAR TURNOVER

We see this same challenge in our offices. There are people on the job for years who don't communicate with their fellow workers, their bosses, or staff. Turnover can be minimized, if not eliminated, with improved communication. Many business people have reported that by using these Techniques they have not only decreased their turnover rate, but have also increased production, and general well-being in their companies.

THE FAMILY BREAK-UP

Lack of communication may be the number one cause for the breakdown of our family structure. In our seminars, we often find people who still can't communicate with one another, much less their family—even after twenty or thirty years of marriage. Happily, they have reported dramatic changes in family relationships, from using these Techniques.

MASTER SECRETS TO IMPROVE COMMUNICATION

PHASE TWO

A simple step to improve communication is to speak the language of the person with whom you are talking.

Each person has developed their own special language: a set of expressions and words which are comfortable. This special language was formed during their early training, their education, and from their environment.

This is the language that they use when speaking to their peers; the people in whom they place confidence. This is the language that they understand and trust. This is their special mode of communication, which they use to process data to solve problems. Become aware of the speech patterns of the two-year-old, the teenager, and the senior citizen. Unfortunately, not everyone tries to understand these special languages. Notice, you are not necessarily looking to match jargon or pet expressions, but you're actually matching the words themselves, the sentence structure, word length, and frequency.

Each profession has and uses a special language. Compare the business person with the lawyer, or the doctor. Yes, sometimes it is meant to razzle-dazzle and impress you, but most often, it is their verbal processing: the way they think.

As an example: Your doctor, if he uses an excessive amount of medical phraseology, may be a poor communicator. The doctor might say you have trouble with your "orbiculus ciliaris."(What is that?) Many doctors forget that their patients have not had medical training. Can the doctor speak the language of the patient? Surely, but like a large number of professionals, they may be so wrapped up in their own world, they forget about others.

Are you so engrossed in your world that you will not take time to learn the language of the people around you?

PROBLEM: Verbal communication
SOLUTION: Study and match common ground vocabulary
TECHNIQUE: General speech-making—verbal

As a master communicator, you will match the vocabulary of the person with whom you are speaking. You will pretty much use the same words and expressions that you both have in common. Remember to match and use only the jargon or expressions that fit your personality. (It's a bit odd to hear a seventy-year-old say, "That's awesome.") Note how a person speaks; what words they are using, and match those words. This is the language they trust and feel comfortable speaking. Be aware, you are not talking down, you are simply speaking the language they understand. The end result is that the person with whom you are communicating will be more relaxed and open to new ideas.

"Phase Three" will take a look at verbal communication in even greater depth.

THE SECRET LANGUAGE OF VERBAL COMMUNICATION

If we study how people express themselves, we get a very important set of clues as to how they process data.

Research has shown that as people develop opinions of themselves and the world around them, they form special speech patterns to express their reactions to that world. Their choice of words can provide clues as to how they process data. By listening to a person's words, we cannot only tell what they feel, smell, touch, taste, and see, we can also observe them, and can tell HOW THEY THINK!

Once you learn how a person thinks, the world of communication will begin to open, and you will be able to predict how that person will react to what you have to say; thus, taking a giant step toward improved communication and increased self-confidence.

There are many types of communication mediums that we tune in to gather "news": TV, radio, newspapers, magazines, and conversations with others. We all have a favorite medium to obtain our worldly news, such as newspapers, for example. Any other medium does not seem, to certain people, to be as effective: one becomes locked into that written form. Although the individual may use several other options, this person always goes to the newspaper for their major data input.

Like the favorite "newspaper," we all have a particular, physical sense that we favor to gather the majority of our data input. The basic modes of data input are the five, physical senses: sight, sound, touch, smell, and taste. As we examine these five senses, we find sight, sound, and touch to be dominant, with the senses of smell and taste being extensions of touch.

After birth, we use all of our senses to gather data—"news" about ourselves and the world around us. From this data, we form opinions about ourselves and our world. In many cases, these "limiting" opinions, right or wrong, stay with us for a lifetime, unless otherwise altered.

Along with opinions, we also form "favorite" modes or channels of processing data. As we grow older, most of us will develop and use only one or two channels—usually a primary and a secondary channel. Some may predominantly use sight to process data, others may use feeling to send information to the brain.

By studying the words—predicates, verbs, adverbs, and adjectives—that a person uses, we can learn their personal "sensing language." When we use their language, they can comfortably process, in their favorite mode, what we are communicating.This builds a bridge toward greater communication.

MASTER SECRETS TO IMPROVE COMMUNICATION

PHASE THREE

PROBLEM: Verbal communication
SOLUTION: Matching data, processing words
TECHNIQUE: Special verbal matching

One of the major breakthroughs in opening the mind of another person, comes from the in-depth work of Milton H. Erickson, M.D. He professed that each individual developed a special set of keys in processing data. And unless these keys are used, that person, associate, client, or loved one will never truly open their mind to understand the ideas of another.

Dr. Jose' Silva uses these ideas in the mental training exercises in The Silva Method, Basic Lecture Series. During many of the guided-imagery sessions, one is told to: "Sense it; feel it; visualize it; know that it is there; pretend that it is there." These simple words are very effective in opening closed doors.

The work of Dr. Erickson was later studied by two, young, brilliant observers, Richard Bandler and John Grinder, Ph.D. The results of this research were integrated into a course, or technology, called Neuro Linguistic Programming. For more NLP information, contact Ed and Maryann Reese, Directors, Southern Institute of NLP, P.O. Box 529T, Indian Rocks Beach, Florida 34635, or call (813) 596-4891. Ed recently co-authored, with Dan Bagley, a great, new book on selling with the NLP methods, Beyond Selling. If you are in sales, this book will be a worthwhile investment.

Neuro Linguistic Programming can be called "the language of the brain neurons," or better yet, "the language of the mind." We will study and learn to use several of these languages to improve our daily communications.

Let's see if we can get a better grasp of these Techniques of the well-informed, successful communicators.

Here are a few examples of words that give clues to specific communication channels.

VISUAL (sight-see)
A "visual" person may use word clues like:
look, focus, perspective, picture, and\or clear.

AUDITORY (sound-hear)
An "auditory" person may use word clues like:
voice, say, listen, talk, and\or sound.

KINESTHETIC (touch-feel)
A "kinesthetic" person may use word clues like:
grasp, firm, touch, concrete, and\or handle.

CHECK YOURSELF

Test your understanding of the Visual (V), Auditory (A), and Kinesthetic (K)—VAK clue words.

A. Underline the VAK clue word or words in the following examples.

B. Identify the most dominant processing mode of the communicator.

1. I have a good feeling about this trip.

( ) Visual
(X) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

2. That's a real bright idea.

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

3. Look in the newspaper and see what's playing at the movies.

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

4. I'm in between a rock and a hard place.

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

5. I hear what you are saying, but I am not sure I like the sound of it.

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

6. I wish my boss would get off my back.

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

7. She always comes up smelling like a rose.

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

8. This place is as dark as the Black Hole of Calcutta.

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

THREE MAJOR KEYS TO IMPROVE VERBAL COMMUNICATION

VISUAL CHANNEL: Sight

The person who has developed a favorite, data processing mode of SIGHT to gather information, will use expressions that relate to sight or visual modes. A visual person will prefer TV to radio; looking at the clouds instead of swimming in a pool; and dreaming of the future rather than cutting the lawn. You can easily spot a visual person by looking at the large number of visual words in their vocabulary.

A visual person might say:

"Let me LOOK at that report again."
"I can SEE that it is not what we want."
"I can't get a CLEAR PICTURE of your ideas."

You can get the PICTURE of what mode a person uses to process data, by LOOKING to SEE what words they are using.

AUDITORY CHANNEL: Sound

An auditory person prefers communication mediums using SOUND, to gather and process data. An auditory person would prefer radio over TV; a concert over a ballet; and would rather listen to the stereo than cut the lawn.

You can easily hear the auditory words spoken by this type of person.

An auditory person might say:

"I would like to HEAR what you have to SAY."
"This doesn't SOUND like what we want."
"Your idea RINGS true."

You may often HEAR these people TALK about their SOUND ideas.

KINESTHETIC CHANNEL: Touch or Feeling

The kinesthetic personality has developed primarily in the TOUCH or FEELING areas. The kinesthetic person would rather swim than watch a movie; dance rather than watch a ballet; and at last, we find someone who might enjoy gardening and cutting the grass.

You can quickly get the feeling of the kinesthetic individual by their choice of words.

A kinesthetic person might say:

"I FEEL that your report has merit."
"You don't seem to have a good GRASP of the problem."
"When you get the details FIRMED up, get in TOUCH with me again."

By this time, you can get a HANDLE on this type of person, by using CONCRETE, SOLID examples in your conversation.

Now let's see how many words you can think of to fit in each category.

VISUAL sight	AUDITORY sound	KINESTHETIC touch

_____ _____ _____

(Total up each category)

By looking at your scores, you should be able to identify your favorite mode of processing data (the highest numbered category). Your next step should be to develop your vocabulary, to become comfortable using words in the column with the lowest number. A master communicator can converse equally well in any mode, and is balanced in all channels.

Most people have a primary channel and a secondary channel. Are you now beginning to understand your dominant channel?

VERY IMPORTANT NOTE

Most people, under stress, resort to only their primary channel. Identify and list the primary processing modes of the people close to you, so that you are prepared to communicate and understand them in case of an emergency.

NAME
PRIMARY PROCESSING MODE
SECONDARY MODE

NAME
PRIMARY PROCESSING MODE
SECONDARY MODE

NAME
PRIMARY PROCESSING MODE
SECONDARY MODE

Let's look at a conversation between two people who process data in different modes or channels.

JOHN SALESPERSON: "I want you to LOOK at this quote. You will SEE how this will save you money."

JUDITH BUYERPERSON: "Yes, I FEEL that you have TOUCHED on some SOLID points. Yet, it seems to have LOOSE ends that need to be TIED up."

JOHN SALESPERSON: "That's because you don't SEE the whole PICTURE. From your point of VIEW, I know it LOOKS a bit SKETCHY, but if you will just let me DEMONSTRATE what my company can do for you, I know that you can FOCUS in on the savings."

JUDITH BUYERPERSON: "But John, the FOUNDATION of our company has been BUILT on cash FLOW. I FEEL that I should HOLD off on the order. There is no rush. When you get your proposal SET, get back in TOUCH with me."

John Salesperson is:

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

Judith Buyerperson is:

( ) Visual
( ) Auditory
( ) Kinesthetic

Will John get the order?

( ) Yes
( ) No

Who could benefit most from improved communication?

( ) John ( ) Judith
( ) Both

Will John get the order? Not likely. It's almost as if these two people were speaking different languages. For all the good it will do, one could be speaking Chinese and the other German.

Who could benefit most from improved communication?

Both.

The buyer's job is to help the company grow, by buying the most cost-effective product. By speaking the language of the salesperson, Judith can get the most complete information, and make the best decision.

The salesperson's very livelihood depends on communication. These principles could mean the difference between success and failure.

How do you communicate with people? Have you ever heard or said, "I don't understand what you mean?" Take time to identify each person's mode of processing data, and practice that mode to improve your communication.

For a better understanding of the use of VAK, let's pretend....

1. Pretend that you are a real estate salesperson: Real estate people will often say that the house a client describes they want is not necessarily the house they buy. The master communicator in real estate will first discover how a person processes their data, or how they make their buying decision. Then, the agent will select a house with special features to match their inner needs.

What are some of the features you, the salesperson, will want to point out:

For a visual person?

(A) 1.
2.
3.
4.

For an auditory person?

(B) 1.
2.
3.
4.

For a kinesthetic person?

(C) 1.
2.
3.
4.

2. You are going on a date. This is your first date with this individual, and you want to make a good impression. You know how this person processes data.

What types of entertainment will this person enjoy the most?

For a visual person?

(D) 1.
2.
3.
4.

For an auditory person?

(E) 1.
2.
3.
4.

For a kinesthetic person?

(F) 1.
2.
3.
4.

3. It's your anniversary, and you want to plan a special gift.

What will you buy your loved one?

For a visual person?

(G) 1.
2.
3.
4.

For an auditory person?

(H) 1.
2.
3.
4.

For a kinesthetic person?

(I) 1.
2.
3.
4.

In what other ways can you think to use these Techniques?

(Answer sheet is located at the end of this Chapter).

SUMMARY

MASTER SECRETS TO IMPROVE COMMUNICATION

PHASE ONE

You can learn to take physical matching to the degree of a master communicator, by studying and matching:

A. Body Posture
   1. Sitting or standing
   2. Position of arms, hands, legs, and feet
   3. Position of head

B. Gesture
   1. Hand movements
   2. Arm movements
   3. Head movements
   4. Body movements

C. Breathing
   1. Fast or slow
   2. Upper, middle, or lower chest

D. Voice
    1. Tempo
        a. fast or slow
    2. Tonality
        a. high or low

E. Facial Mannerisms
    1. Eye blinking
    2. Expressions
        a. smile: mouth opened or closed
        b. scowl or frown

Once this rapport has been established, you may take the lead to change the mood of the person.

PRACTICE AT LEVEL

At a relaxed level of mind (see next Chapter), imagine different people (subjects), and mentally observe them, then match their physical communication symbols. Make a mental movie: first match their body posture (1, 2, 3, & 4); then their gestures (1, 2, 3, & 4); then breathing (1 & 2); voice (1 & 2); then their facial mannerisms (1 & 2). Imagine the numerous possibilities at different levels, this can take several sessions. Imaging at your relaxed level of mind internalizes the data and greatly speeds the successful use of these Techniques.

PHASE TWO

A simple step to improve communications is to speak the language of the person with whom you are conversing.

You will choose to study and match the verbal word patterns, not necessarily looking to match jargon or pet expressions, but the words themselves; the sentence structure: word length, and frequency.

PHASE THREE

Study and identify the individual's major, internal decision-making mode. Identify how they process data, by noticing the largest percentage of words that fall into the three categories:

1. Visual
2. Auditory
3. Kinesthetic

Your next step to becoming a successful communicator will be to match and converse in their processing mode.

CHECK YOURSELF

Discover how you process data: what descriptive phrases do you use? To check yourself, find an old letter that you have written. (Be aware that you write entirely differently than you speak.) However, you will find your favorite or dominant pattern in the letters you have written.

Practice changing your patterns of speech: visual, auditory, or kinesthetic words and phrases. The more you practice, the more automatic you will become at using these techniques with others.

As you progress, you might study and practice matching: body posture, hand gestures, breathing, voice tonality, and tempo; expressions, facial mannerisms (such as eye-blinking), and the many other facets of a person's behavior.

The fine art of communication and persuasion is a gift that must be polished.

A Few Answers Might Be . . . .

(From pages 31, 32 & 33)

(1) A.
1. beautiful view
2. spacious lot
3. color
4. landscaping

B.
1. knock on sound wall
2. quiet neighborhood
3. lively (noisy) neighborhood
4. birds singing

C.
1. fireplace
2. feel of carpet
3. cool or warm
4. smell of flowers

(2) D.
1. movie
2. play
3. museum
4. TV

E.
1. concert
2. stereo
3. Christmas cards
4. opera

F.
1. swimming
2. walk in park
3. dancing
4. eating

(3) G.
1. VCR
2. kaleidoscope
3. TV
4. microscope

H.
1. radio/stereo
2. singing telegram
3. records/CD
4. chimes

I.
1. sports equipment
2. fur coat
3. silk or satin
4. heater

MASTER SECRETS TO TELL HOW ANOTHER IS THINKING

MASTER SECRETS TO TELL HOW ANOTHER IS THINKING

MASTER SECRETS TO IMPROVE COMMUNICATION

PHASE FOUR

Another exciting area of concern from the NLP world deals with the physical signs of data processing.

It appears that when you ask someone a specific type of question, their eyes will automatically move in a prescribed manner.

PHYSICAL CLUES TO VISUAL PROCESSING

For example: If you ask a question that requires their processing mode to recall a visual answer, their eyes will generally look up and to the right or left.

Although there are exceptions to most rules, we can generally say that eyes looking up and to the right or left, will indicate that the person you are watching is processing visually. This does NOT mean, at this point, that this person is a visual person. We will examine that possibility later.

How you construct the question to be asked, discerning an individual's visual processing, is very important. A question that involves sound or feeling will not work: it must be a question that would evoke a visual answer. To make the matter even more interesting, there are two types of questions for visual processing. As we will find out later, these two types of questions also apply to the auditory processing.

TWO FORMS OF QUESTIONS

There are two forms of questions that evoke specific processing, and give physical data that we can see and use to improve communication.

1. A recall question — a question that requires the recall of data filed in a person's memory bank (brain).
2. A construct question — a question that requires construction of new data, using imagination or creativity.

RECALL QUESTION

A "recall question" would require, what at this point we would call, visualization. This type of question will stimulate the recall of previously stored data (memories). This data could be pictures, sounds, or feelings. There should be nothing new created here: The person with whom you are communicating should already know the information, and simply recall the answer.

If you were asked, "What does a red rose look like?" you would simply go to your memory bank, and recall a memory of a living or artificial red rose, or simply recall a picture of a red rose you have seen in the past. This recall process takes a matter of seconds. If we accept a very simple version of a split brain model, we might expect this data to be stored predominantly in the right brain hemisphere.

CONSTRUCT QUESTION

A "construct question" would require a person to use their imagination. This type of question will lead to the construction of NEW pictures, sounds, or feelings. The data must be created from previously stored fragments of information.

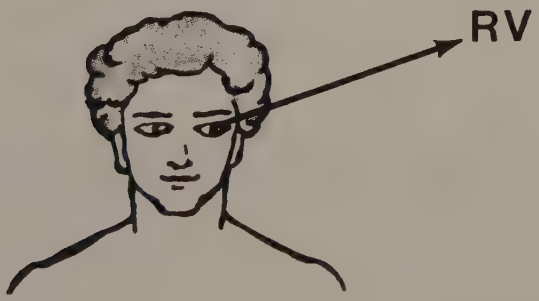

If you were asked, "What does a blue rose look like?" the process might be more complicated. You might first search your memory for a blue rose: If nothing was found, you would recall a red rose; then recall the color blue; and then make the red rose blue; thereby, constructing a new image of a blue rose. After this processing, you would then have an image of a blue rose in your memory. From then on, you would just recall what a blue rose looked like—no need to construct it again. This analytical processing might cause you to use your left brain hemisphere.

NOTE: ALWAYS TEST WITH QUESTIONING BEFORE ASSUMING THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION TO BE TRUE.

VISUAL RECALL — PHYSICAL DATA

When you ask a specific question requiring a visual-recall answer, you will see the eyes of the person asked, go up and to your right.

"What is the color of your house?"

VISUAL CONSTRUCT — PHYSICAL DATA

When you ask a specific question requiring the construction of a visual answer, you will watch the eyes of the person asked, go up and to your left.

"What would your house look like if it were painted green with big, pink polka dots?"

SPECIAL DATA FOR VISUAL PROCESSING INFORMATION

Eyes defocused and unmoving could also indicate visual accessing. When their eyes are up and moving left to right, back and forth, it often means visual construction is in progress.

TESTING IS IMPORTANT

HOW TO TEST

These eye movements are correct for most people, however, there are many exceptions. You can be most effective by asking several different questions, and checking the results. You may find the positions reversed in a particular individual and, in some rare cases, be entirely different. You will frame your questions to fit the conversation, usually areas of interest to both parties.

We will assume from here on, that all people fit our perfect model. Just remember, that in actual use you must "calibrate" the eye movements in each individual.

Directions on how to construct testing questions, along with sample questions, are at the end of this Chapter.

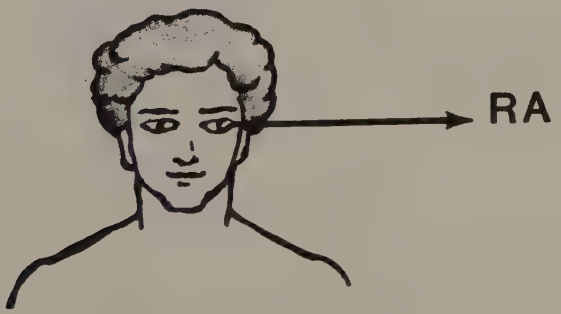

PHYSICAL CLUES TO AUDITORY PROCESSING

When auditory processing is taking place, the person's eyes will move toward their ear, right or left. It is almost as if the brain is listening for the data. As in the visual processing, the two types of questions will give us much information.

AUDITORY RECALL — PHYSICAL DATA

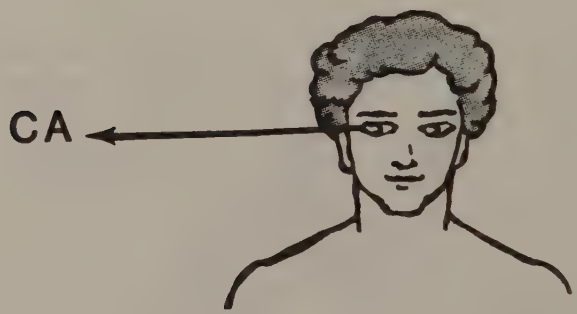

When asking a specific question requiring an auditory-recall answer, you will observe the eyes of the person asked, move toward their ear to your right.

"What does a police car siren sound like?"

AUDITORY CONSTRUCT — PHYSICAL DATA

When you ask a question requiring an auditory-construct answer, you will observe the eyes of the person asked, move toward their ear to your left.

"What does the sound of a flute turning into a baby crying sound like?"

The internal world of sound is one of the strongest data fields, although it is the least dominant to be accessed.

PHYSICAL CLUES TO KINESTHETIC PROCESSING

Kinesthetic Clues Are Different

It appears that the kinesthetic processing is a totally different ball game. Possibly because kinesthetic deals with feelings, both physical and emotional. Physical or body sensations are accessed in one mode, and emotional feelings are accessed in another. Also, both construct and recall are in the same eye position.

SPECIAL DATA FOR KINESTHETIC PROCESSING

Our model for kinesthetic processing is slightly different from the standard NLP data. Neuro Linguistic Programming's research has shown, that when a person's eyes are down and to your left, they are accessing internal dialogue or "self-talk."

Although we are fully aware that NLP may be totally accurate, our limited research suggests a slightly different model. For our purposes in Silva Mind Mastery, let's assume that when the person's eyes are down and toward your left, the individual is processing emotional feelings or kinesthetic emotion.

PHYSICAL CLUES TO KINESTHETIC EMOTIONAL DATA

When a specific question is asked requiring an emotional answer, you will observe the eyes of the person you are observing, move down and to your left.

"What does it feel like to really be in love?"

PHYSICAL CLUES TO KINESTHETIC PHYSICAL DATA

When a specific question is asked requiring a body or physical sensation answer, you will see the eyes of the person asked, move down and to your right.

"What does it feel like when you are very tired?"

You will notice that there are NO construct and recall modes. The accessing for both construct and recall are in the same position. That is, emotional construct and recall are observed down and to your left; physical construct and recall are observed down and to your right.

BENEFITS

Ways to improve your communication skills, using these processing clues, are almost unlimited. We conduct special classes for supervisors, security personnel, and members of the law enforcement agencies. The Techniques for extracting accurate information, and how to interrogate and conduct interviews, can be invaluable to those in this line of work.

LIARS ARE LEFT

Many people in the law enforcement and investigation areas go on the assumption that "liars are left." When talking to a witness or suspect, they watch their eyes. For example: When the suspect's eyes go to the right, it's a clue that the information the suspect is giving may be true. If their eyes go to the left, during specific questioning, there is a good chance that the suspect is making up the information. This hypothesis is used after several test questions—determining the individual's mode of processing. Of course, the eyes going to the left does not necessarily mean that the person is lying. Sometimes we can't recall the entire event so we will "fill in details": little bits of fabricated information are added to make the story or statement flow smoother. So, eyes to the left could mean "almost the truth." Remember, nothing is absolute; these are only clues to improve communication skills.

CLUES TO IDENTIFY THE PRIMARY MODE

Many people believe that you can spot the primary mode of an individual, by watching the first position that their eyes move when they are asked a neutral question.

Teachers can determine how a student processes a math problem, (as an example) by watching the first movements of their eyes when asked a math question. With this information, the teacher can help the student toward a better understanding of math. For additional teaching information, we recommend the book, Metateaching, listed in our "Bibliography."

PDR—PDR—PDR
PDR—PDR—PDR
PDR—PDR—PDR

The only shortcut to success using these Techniques is PDR:

P = PRACTICE
D = DRILL
R = REHEARSE

There is no substitute for putting these Techniques into action. Apply your "whole brain" thinking to the information in this Chapter. To better internalize this material: next time through the information, use the "Relaxation Techniques" in the next Chapter. PDR in your mind's eye first, and then put it into practice at the outer level.

IMPROVE RECALL

A way to help you improve the recall of this information would be to: read through the "Summary"; then close your eyes and think of the highlights of the information; your next step will be to recall any details pertaining to the highlights (now, newly recalled data). Examine your day and your tomorrow: who are you meeting or seeing, and how can you begin to improve communications? When you have covered as much as you feel like doing, take a deep breath and exhale slowly, then open your eyes and proceed.

SUMMARY

MASTER KEYS TO TELL HOW ANOTHER IS THINKING

By noticing their eye movements, you can receive many, valuable clues as to how an individual is thinking.

EYES UP = VISUAL ACCESSING EYES UP TO LEFT = VISUAL CONSTRUCT
EYES UP TO RIGHT = VISUAL RECALL

EYES TOWARD EAR = AUDITORY ACCESSING EYES TOWARD EAR ON YOUR LEFT = AUDITORY CONSTRUCT EYES TOWARD EAR ON YOUR RIGHT = AUDITORY RECALL

EYES DOWN = KINESTHETIC ACCESSING EYES DOWN TOWARD LEFT = EMOTIONAL FEELINGS
EYES DOWN TOWARD RIGHT = PHYSICAL FEELINGS

The above directions indicate your right or left, as you observe the person facing you.

YOU NOW HAVE THE KEYS TO OPEN THE LOCKED DOOR OF COMMUNICATION. USE THE KEYS, AND OPEN THAT DOOR FOR A BETTER, HAPPIER, MORE PRODUCTIVE WORLD.

EYE ACCESSING MOVEMENTS FOR A "NORMALLY ORGANIZED" RIGHT-HANDED PERSON

VISUAL-RECALL TEST QUESTIONS

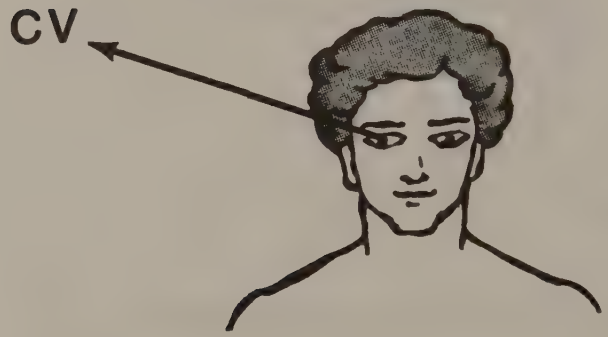

To check, ask a question about an image that the person has seen before; something that is a known quantity.

Example:

"What color is your mother's hair?"
"What does your coat look like?"

Which direction did their eyes move?

VISUAL-CONSTRUCT TEST QUESTIONS

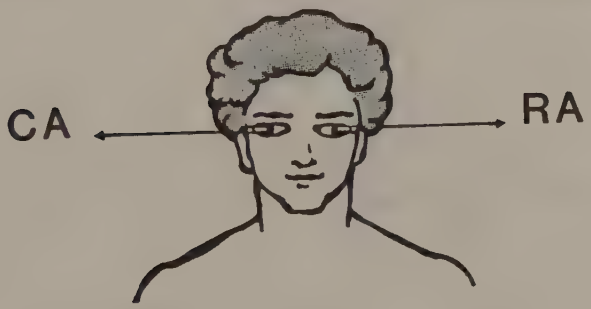

To check, ask a question about an image the person has never seen before; something that is an unknown quantity.

Example:

"What would a yellow kangaroo with black stripes look like?"
"What would you look like if you had green hair?"

Which direction did their eyes move?

AUDITORY-RECALL TEST QUESTIONS

Example:

"What does your car horn sound like?"
"What does your alarm clock sound like?"

AUDITORY-CONSTRUCT TEST QUESTIONS

Example:

"What would the sound of your car horn turning into a girl singing sound like?"
"What would your name sound like pronounced backwards?"

Which direction did their eyes move?

KINESTHETIC-EMOTION TEST QUESTIONS

Example:

"What does it feel like to be disappointed?"
"What does it feel like to be happy?"

KINESTHETIC-SENSATION TEST QUESTIONS

Example:

"What does it feel like to touch the bark of a tree?"
"What does it feel like to run?"

Which direction did their eyes move?

CV - Visual-Constructed Images
(eyes up right)
RV - Visual-Recalled (Eidetic) Images
(eyes up left)
(Eyes defocused and unmoving also indicate visual accessing.)
CA - Auditory-Constructed Sounds or Words
(eyes horizontal and to the right)
RA - Auditory-Recalled Sounds or Words
(eyes horizontal and to the left)
EK - Kinesthetic Feelings
Memory of Emotion - Recalled
(eyes down right)
BK - Kinesthetic Feelings
Body Sensations - Recalled
(eyes down left)

INSTANT
STRESS REDUCTION AND RELAXATION

INSTANT STRESS REDUCTION AND RELAXATION

STRESS can be a killer of success. Yet, according to noted stress expert, Dr. Hans Selye, "We will always have stress," for he believes that stress is equal to problems. "Stress keeps us young and alive, provided that we have techniques to overcome its effects," says Selye.

In his early research, Dr. Jose' Silva, discovered that his Mind Development Techniques were effective in handling stress. Dr. Silva's research uncovered some very interesting information on stress. By understanding the stress factors, we can become aware of when to use our relaxation tools to reduce the effects of stress and fatigue.

MAJOR FACTORS

1. GUILT

Example: When you internally know an act is wrong, such as smoking when you know it is bad for your health. Any type of dishonesty, from the theft of a paper clip or stamp from the office, to cheating on your income tax, are further examples.

If, after reading the above paragraph, you felt resentment, or had an uneasy feeling, you may be experiencing the emotion of guilt.

2. LOSS OF GREAT VALUE

Example: When the loss is hopeless and cannot be recouped, such as the loss of a loved one, bankruptcy, uninsured flood damage, jail sentence.

3. HATING WHERE YOU WORK OR LIVE

"If you just hate to do a thing, that hatred for it develops body-destructive toxins, and you become fatigued very soon. You must love anything you must do. Do it not only cheerfully, but lovingly, and the very best way you know how. That love of the work which you must do anyhow, will vitalize your body and keep you from fatigue." —Walter Russell (The Man Who Tapped the Secrets of the Universe by Glen Clark.)

WARNING SIGNS

FIRST WARNING OR PHYSICAL SIGNS OF EXCESS STRESS

INSOMNIA
HEADACHES
HEARTBURN
BACKACHES
PEPTIC ULCERS
CRAMPS INDIGESTION

LEADING TO:

ARTHRITIS
GLAUCOMA
MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS STROKE CANCER
LEUKEMIA

FIRST WARNING OR MENTAL SIGNS OF EXCESS STRESS

LACK OF CONCENTRATION
LOSS OF MEMORY ANXIETY
UNJUSTIFIABLE FEAR
QUICK TO CRY
QUICK TO ANGER
EXCESSIVEWORRY

LEADING TO:

LOSS OF CONFIDENCE
PHYSICAL ILLNESS
TOTAL MENTAL BREAKDOWN

THE STRESS OF ADJUSTING TO CHANGE

The Social Readjustment Scale

Let's identify these stress factors even further. Drs. Thomas H. Holmes and Richard H. Rahe, psychiatrists at the University of Washington Medical School, have devised a scale of measuring stressful events.

The following is an updated version of the Holmes and Rahe scale of stress impact. As you go down the list, note your score for the past year.

EVENT	SCALE OF IMPACT
Death of a spouse	100
Divorce	73
Marital separation	65
Jail term	63
Death of a close family member	63
Personal injury or illness	53
Marriage	50
Fired at work	47
Marital reconciliation	45
Retirement	45
Change in health of a family member	44
Pregnancy	40

Sexual difficulties	39
Gain of a new family member	39
Business readjustment	39
Change in financial state	38
Death of a close friend	37
Change to different line of work	36
Change in number of arguments with spouse	35
Mortgage over $40,000	31
Foreclosure of mortgage or loan	30
Change in responsibilities at work	29
Son or daughter leaving home	29
Trouble with in-laws	29
Outstanding personal achievement	28
Spouse begins or stops work	26
Begin or end school	26
Change in living conditions	25
Revision of personal habits	24
Trouble with boss	23
Change in work hours or conditions	20
Change in residence	20
Change in schools	20
Change in recreation	19
Change in church activities	19
Change in social activities	18
Mortgage or loan less than $40,000	17
Change in sleeping habits	16
Change in number of family get-togethers	15

Change in eating habits 15
Vacation 13
Christmas 12
Minor violations of the law 11

If your score is above 150 accumulated points in one year's time, you are subjected to high levels of stress—sometimes associated with emotional or physical illness.

NEUTRALIZE STRESS

To neutralize or dissolve the accumulation of the stress-enzyme, lactate, it will be extremely helpful to follow this four-step process.

1. VITAMINS

Research shows that stress rapidly burns up the B-complex vitamins stored within the body. To be truly effective, vitamins should be taken in a balance of supportive groups of vitamins and minerals. Therefore, many doctors recommend a daily intake of a good, safe multi-vitamin. Beware of megavitamins, unless prescribed by your physician or health caretaker.

2. EXERCISE

Physical exercise is helpful in actively using up the stress-enzyme accumulated in the body's muscle tissues. Join a local spa, or just do fifteen minutes of exercise in the privacy of your own home. A leisurely walk around the block may be a simple way to start an exercise program. Always consult your physician before beginning any exercise program.

3. RELAXATION

Mental and physical relaxation is recommended for balance. For example, going to the Alpha (brainwave) Level is the best form of relaxation, both physical and mental. However, some other forms of relaxation might be to: lie on the beach and watch the waves; listen to relaxing music, especially New Age music; observe cloud patterns; engage in a pleasant daydream; and of course, play the Silva Mind Mastery, Basic Stress Reduction and Relaxation Audiocassette.

4. FAMILY AND FRIENDS

A supportive team of positive friends is very beneficial to help balance one's life. Get involved in office networking, socialize with your neighbors, attend important family get-togethers.

DRUGS AND ALCOHOL

Medical research seems to prove that stress causes breakdown of the body's natural immune system, leading to physical illness. Of course, the easiest way to overcome stress is to relax.

Everywhere you look, you find people stressing themselves trying to overcome stress. Many, in a desperate attempt to relax, resort to drugs and alcohol. This type of relaxation is at best, only temporary, and the side effects can be physically and mentally disastrous.

The side effects of drugs and alcohol, besides the obvious, is that they seem to suppress the natural immune system in the body. Ill health is added to the already long list of stressors in one's life. The following Techniques can break this "Catch-22 syndrome."

The Basic Stress Reduction and Relaxation Exercise is a mental-training technique designed to help you achieve deep, relaxed levels of mind and body. Continued use of this mental exercise has been proven effective in helping reduce stress, and in promoting general, good health.

At the end of this chapter, you will find a complete script of this Relaxation Exercise. You can easily make your own cassette tape and play it back, guiding yourself to these healthy Levels. This is a simplified version of the famous Silva Long Relaxation Exercise. Prerecorded tapes may be obtained from your favorite bookstore, or by mail from the Publisher.

THE POWER OF ALPHA

Entering your relaxed level of mind and body has many benefits. This relaxed level is associated with the production of Alpha brainwave activity. You spend most of your day at a brainwave frequency of about twenty cycles per second, called Beta. This rhythm is the weakest of all brainwave patterns.

By quieting the mind and body, you will increase the production of Alpha, a brain rhythm between eight and fourteen cycles per second. Functioning at the Alpha brainwave pattern increases the healing processes of the body: as much as ten times faster than at Beta, according to Dr.

Barbara Brown in her books, New Mind, New Body and Super Mind.

Alpha brain rhythm, besides being the strongest of all brain frequencies, is the most effective for reprogramming your inner-conscious levels. Dramatic and lasting changes can be made, quickly and easily with the Silva Mind Mastery, Basic Stress Reduction and Relaxation, Mental Training Exercise.

INSTANT STRESS AND RELAXATION CONTROLS

After you practice The Basic Stress Reduction and Relaxation Exercise at least seven times, you will be able to instantly recall this beneficial, relaxed feeling of mind and body with the following Techniques.

The Thumbnail and The Thumb Stroke Techniques will give you the tools that you need to turn stress and pressure into a relaxed, confident feeling of well-being. (The why and how of trigger mechanisms is discussed in the "Magic Triggers of the Mind" chapter.)

INSTANT RELAXATION TECHNIQUE

The Thumbnail Technique

Any time you feel tense or tired The Thumbnail Technique can instantly trigger a refreshed and pleasant, relaxed feeling of the mind and body. Relaxation is now at your fingertips.

To create this valuable mental program, enter your relaxed level of mind and body with The Basic Stress Reduction and Relaxation Exercise. At that relaxed level of mind, gently press your thumbnail with your first finger, and imagine yourself relaxing, while mentally saying to yourself:

"Every time I lightly press on my thumbnail with my first finger, I will quickly enter a pleasant, relaxed state of mind and body."

Now, slowly release the pressure and again, imagine your body relaxing even more.

Repeat this process at the Alpha Level, three times, in order to reinforce this trigger mechanism. Then count out of Level, from one to five and open your eyes.

You will enter deeper states of relaxation each time you use the Thumbnail Technique. This Technique may be used any time you choose to totally relax, even when keeping your eyes open. The effects of this Technique may be reinforced through practice.

INSTANT STRESS CONTROL

The Thumb Stroke Technique

Any time you suspect or feel stress coming on, you will have The Thumb Stroke Technique to help you decrease the stress. Set up this trigger mechanism in much the same manner as the Thumbnail Technique.

At your relaxed level of mind, while slowly stroking down from the first joint to the tip of the thumb, mentally tell yourself:

"Each time I stroke my thumb with my forefinger; slowly stroking down the first joint to the tip of the thumb, I will imagine the stress leaving my body, and I will feel more confident to cope or handle any situation."

Repeat this process three times, and then come out of your relaxed level of mind, counting from one to five.

This "trigger" will always be at your fingertips when you need it.

HOW SOON SHOULD YOU EXPECT RESULTS?

Practice these Techniques and you will be well on your way to handling stress. You will enjoy a healthy feeling of total relaxation without the use of drugs. You will notice a change in your health and your attitude about life. How long before you begin to see and feel results? Many people report improvements after their first use; others notice changes after several trips to their relaxed levels.

HOW OFTEN SHOULD YOU PRACTICE?

To quote Jose' Silva, concerning the frequency of practice, "Once a day is good; two times a day is very good; and three times a day is excellent. To practice five minutes a day is good; ten minutes is very good; and fifteen minutes is excellent. To correct health problems, practice for fifteen minutes, three times a day."

We have included a script of our complete Basic Stress Reduction and Relaxation Exercise for your personal use only. Please remember that all contents in this book are copyrighted materials, and may not be recorded or printed in any manner, without written permission of the copyright owner, except for your personal use.

BASIC RELAXATION

Enter "Level One" (the basic plane level) with the use of the "Three to One Method."

Find a comfortable position, close your eyes and take a deep breath.

Take another deep breath and while exhaling, mentally repeat and visualize the number 3, three times.

Three (pause). Three (pause). Three (pause).

Take another deep breath and while exhaling, mentally repeat and visualize the number 2, three times.

Two (pause). Two (pause). Two (pause).

Take another deep breath and while exhaling, mentally repeat and visualize the number 1, three times.

One (pause). One (pause). One (pause).

You are now at Level One, the basic plane level that you are learning to use to improve all facets of your business and personal lives.

To help you enter a deeper, healthier, more relaxed level of mind, I am going to count from ten to one, giving you directions on each descending number.

On each descending number, you will feel yourself going deeper, relaxing even more. You will enter deeper, healthier (physical and mental) relaxed levels of mind.

To more effectively direct the mind toward complete relaxation, we will use the visual image of a blue-white light—moving slowly down the body, completely relaxing the entire body and mind.

10 . . . Imagine a blue-white light entering the top of your head, relaxing the top of your head and the forehead areas. Feel the blue-white light removing the stress in your mind and leaving an alert, yet relaxed feeling....

9 . . . Imagine the blue-white light moving slowly down into the eyes . . . relaxing the eyes . . . Feel how relaxed they are . . . Feel the blue-white light flowing down . . . relaxing the face . . . down, down . . . Part the lips slightly . . . relax . . . Take a deep breath and exhale slowly. As you exhale, relax even more . . . .

8 . . . Feel the blue-white light moving down into the back of the neck, relaxing the neck and shoulder muscles . . . You may imagine hands gently massaging the neck and shoulder areas . . . Feel the muscles relaxing in the neck and shoulders . . . Feel yourself going deeper . . . .

7 . . . Picture the blue-white light moving down into the arms, relaxing the arms . . . down into the elbows . . . relaxing, soothing, healing . . . The blue-white light now moves down into the forearms . . . Feel the arms and hands getting heavy in your lap . . . Relax your hands . . . Feel the tingling sensation in your fingers . . . relax . . . Feel the tension leaving the body through the fingers . . . relax. . . .

6 . . . Deeper and deeper . . . Imagine the blue-white light again entering the neck and shoulder areas . . . completely relaxing these areas . . . Feel hands gently massaging the neck and shoulders . . . Feel the blue-white light moving down into the chest . . . relaxing all the organs in the chest area . . . .

5 . . . The light now moves down into the stomach and intestinal areas . . . relaxing, soothing, healing . . . .

4 . . . The relaxing light now moves down into the reproductive organs . . . relax . . . Down into the hip area . . . Feel the relaxation flowing down . . . down . . . down . . . .

3 . . . This relaxing sensation is moving down into the thighs . . . relax the thighs . . . Deeper and deeper toward a state of total relaxation . . . The blue-white light now flows down . . . down . . . relaxing the knees . . . Relax the knees . . . .

2 . . . Deeper and deeper toward total relaxation . . . Feel the blue-white light flowing down . . . down . . . relaxing the ankles . . . down . . . down . . into the feet . . . relaxing the toes and soles of your feet . . . Imagine the tingling sensation in your feet as they relax . . . .

1 . . . You are now totally relaxed. Each time you enter your relaxed level of mind and body, you will go deeper; faster and easier than this time.

To help you enter a deeper, healthier, more relaxed level of mind, I am going to count from one to three, and make a sound with my fingers. At that moment, you will use visualization to project yourself to a place where you have been relaxed before. Imagine a pleasant, relaxed environment. Pretend to actually be there . . . . See what you will see . . . Hear what you will hear . . . Touch what you will touch . . . Smell what you will smell . . . Taste what you will taste . . . , and Feel what you will feel.

One . . . (pause)

Two . . . (pause)

At the count of three, you will project yourself to your place of relaxation. When you next hear my voice, a long, long time will have elapsed at this level of mind. My voice will not startle you; you will take a deep breath and go deeper.

Three (snap your fingers).

Relax. (pause 30 seconds)

Relax . . . . Take a deep breath and go deeper. (pause)

(Insert your programming statements here. For example, are inserted here for you. Later, you can create your own positive statements and mental programs.)

We will now program a positive trigger mechanism: The Thumbnail Technique.

To help you instantly relax, you can use the finger on The Thumbnail Technique. Mentally tell yourself that, "Each time I lightly press on my thumbnail with my first finger, I will quickly enter a pleasant, relaxed state of mind and body."

At this time, press your thumbnail with your first finger, and imagine yourself relaxing. Now slowly release the pressure, and again feel your body relaxing even more . . . . Feel how relaxed you are.

Each time you use The Thumbnail Technique, you will enter a deeper and more pleasant, relaxed level of mind and body; faster and easier than this time. This Technique may be used any time you choose to instantly relax, even when keeping your eyes open while conducting your daily activities.

We will now program another positive trigger mechanism, The Thumb Stroke Technique.

Mentally say to yourself: "Each time I stroke my thumb with my forefinger; slowly stroking down the first joint to the tip of the thumb, I will imagine the stress leaving my body, and I will feel more confident to cope or handle any situation."

At this time, slowly stroke your thumb in this manner, and imagine the stress dissipating.

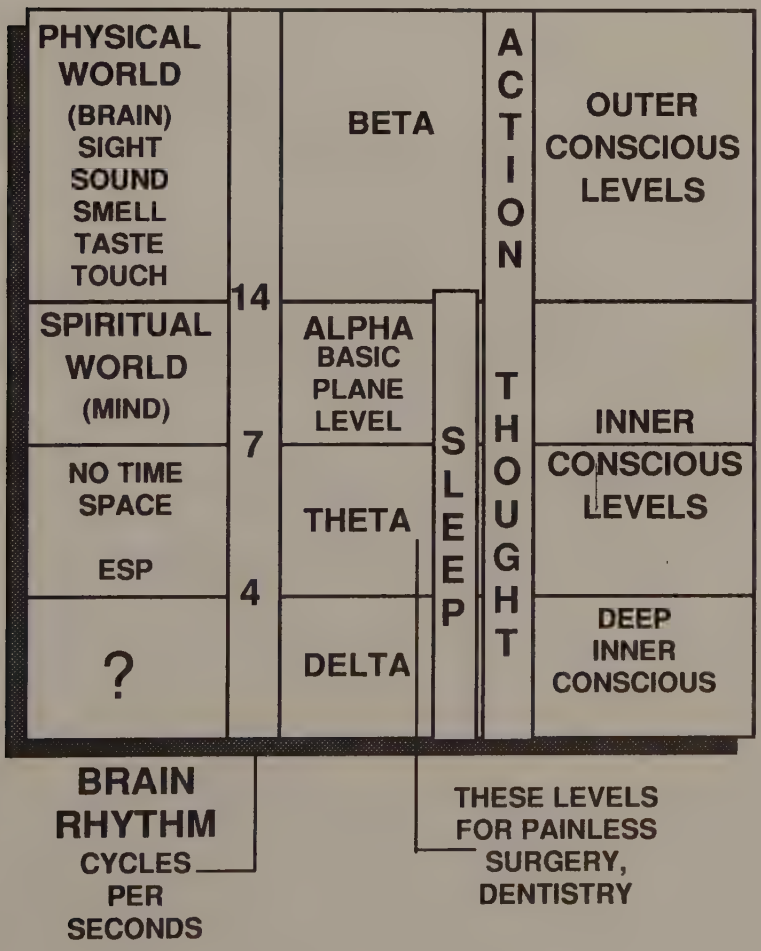

(end of programming statement)

In a moment I am going to count from one to five. At the count of five, you will open your eyes; be wide awake; full of relaxed energy; feeling better than before.

One . . . two, coming out slowly now . . . three . . . At the count of five you will open your eyes, be wide awake, feeling confident and secure . . . You will have no ill effects in your hearing, vision, or eyesight: no headache. Your vision, eyesight, and hearing will improve each time you enter these deeper levels of mind . . . four . . . five . . . (snap fingers) . . . Eyes open, wide awake . . . feeling fine and in perfect health . . . feeling confident and secure in your abilities.

SCALE OF BRAIN EVOLUTION

MENTAL DATA PROCESSING AND HOLOGRAPHIC INNERGIZATION

MENTAL DATA PROCESSING AND HOLOGRAPHIC INNERGIZATION

Brain research is moving swiftly forward by leaps and bounds. In 1981, the Nobel Prize in Medicine was awarded to Dr. Roger Speery, for his "Split Brain Theory." This research started a new wave of thinking about the analytical dominance of the left brain hemisphere. As the dust of right/left brain controversy began to settle, several new theories opened to the world; new models for the further understanding of the brain.

We will briefly examine some of the exciting works of Dr. Carl Pribram, of Stanford University, who has been a forerunner in brain/mind research. And later, in the"Instant Attitude Adjustment" section, we'll look at the work of Dr. Gordon Bower, also from Stanford University, who has helped us understand the dynamic power of emotional processing.

Up until the publishing of Dr. Pribram's brain/mind work, it was generally believed that each piece of data or information was stored only in a specific location. As a simplified example: One specific brain neuron would store the data to recognize a hand, and another brain neuron would identify an ear. The work of Dr. Carl Pribram points to the discovery of a new and unique way of how the brain stores data: the same, basic information is stored in multiple locations.

This new research, showing us that similar information is recorded in a number of locations in the brain, gave birth to Dr. Pribram's "Holographic Brain Theory."

THE BRAIN WORKS LIKE A HOLOGRAM

The Holographic Brain Theory comes by its name because the brain gathers, collects, and stores data much in the same way a hologram is made. The hologram is produced from multiple sets of images or "points of reference" of the same object: different viewpoints or perspectives of the same object, person, or thing.

Since I have been a collector of holograms for many years, this comparison of the brain being like a hologram immediately caught my attention. One day, I inadvertently broke one of my holograms, and I discovered an interesting sidelight. The film can be cut in half, and both pieces of film will still project a three-dimensional image. The film may again be cut in half, and each piece still projects the three-dimensional image.

The cutting (or breaking) however, will cause an interesting phenomenon to happen to the projected picture: the details will not be as full. Although the image will remain three-dimensional, the perspective will not be as complete. For example: if the complete hologram is a full face, and the right half of the film is destroyed, you will still have a three-dimensional image; however, it will primarily be the left side of the face only.

The better-quality holograms have a larger number of recorded images or points of reference, creating a more detailed, denser, sharper, three-dimensional image. Dr. Pribram feels the brain records or identifies data in a similar arrangement: multiple images. The same data is recorded in a "family" of brain neurons.

VISUALIZATION VS. IMAGINATION

Many people don't visualize. Yet, we know that they could not perform the simplest action without visualizing. This complex problem may be addressed using the Holographic Brain Theory.

The difference between "visualization" and "imagination" is clearly defined by Jose` Silva. He says, "Visualization is simply recalling previously stored information (memories). Imagination is creating totally new information, or altering, in some creative manner, the stored data."

BEGINNINGS OF THE HOLOGRAPHIC VISUALIZATION THEORY

Visualization has been an important topic of concern in our many seminars throughout the world. In 1981, I was asked to address the subject of improving visualization at "The Silva International Convention" in Laredo, Texas. This Seminar was recorded and has been a best-selling audiocassette for a number of years.

In those early years, we knew that in order to increase the faculty of visualization, one had to increase the details of the data originally put into the brain. This is done through better powers of observation. By increasing the points of reference; adding more details, one could increase visualization.

The art of visualization is much like the holographic image. In order for the visual picture to be as strong as the hologram, the details of the visual image must be complete. The more data, detail and different viewpoints, the stronger the visual (mental) picture.

THE ARTIST AND VISUALIZATION

People with artistic training are great at visualization. It's not some special gift, it is simply the way artistic people have trained themselves to look at an object.

When artists look at a ball, they see many things that the average person does not see: the ball; the space around the ball; the surface on which the ball is sitting; the shadows that the ball casts; the difference in color; the light and the dark shadings of the ball itself; and of course, the reflected light on the ball. So to improve visualization, you need to get on the ball!

The problem with most people's images is that they lack attention to detail in their original observations. In order to have a "good picture," you must have "good points of reference." To improve visualization, pay close attention to details of your everyday work-a-day, play-a-day world. Begin to look at the whole picture.

The starting formula for understanding "Holographic Visualization" is:

Good Observation
Equals
Good Visualization

THE TRUE CAUSE FOR SUCCESS OR FAILURE

The secret of successful, mental programming is to be able to create a complete mental image. Any image less than perfect will be rejected as false, if the data does not correspond to the stored information (memories).

WHAT IS A PROGRAM?

What is a "program"? We use this word throughout this book. A program is a process of setting up and inputting into the brain, a series of specific data or information, arranged in such a manner that it evokes a specific response from one's brain, mind, or body. Programs can be negative or positive depending on the input. Most of your negative programs have been entered into the brain by accident or a misunderstanding of the basic principles.

Programs that are discussed in this book will be positive unless noted. You may use positive programs to restructure negative behavior or to create future positive behavior, such as, thinking about and imaging a future goal; working on eliminating bad habits or negative beliefs. Simply stated, a program is using brain/mind power to work on something that you want—that you don't have now. Programs are most effective when entered at the relaxed Alpha Level of mind, as in the Stress Reduction and Relaxation Exercise in the last Chapter.

COMFORT ZONES— THE MASTERS OF ONE'S LIFE

We have created inner safety zones or "comfort zones" about our own capabilities and about the world around us. We feel that we know our limitations: right or wrong, we believe that we know what is possible, and what we can and cannot do. These inner beliefs are not generally known to our outer conscious levels. Therefore, regardless of what we desire—money, fame, fortune, or a successful relationship—we can only perform according to inner expectations of our present comfort zones.

A comfort zone seems to act as a bubble around us. Anything we desire that is outside our preconceived inner image of ourselves will cause mental and physical stress. Our inner conscious will try to keep our actions within the prescribed pattern, to prevent anxiety and fear of failure. In some cases, the fear of success or change may cause the inner conscious to do all that is in its power to destroy our goals.

In order to break out of this destructive mental loop, we must fool the mind into believing that we have previously completed the action; thereby, expanding our comfort zones.

THE "REEL" EXPERIENCE

The inner conscious will not block an action or goal that it believes is nothing new; in other words, is status quo. The easy way to "reprogram" or fool the mind is to create what we might call a "Reel Experience." A Reel Experience is more than a visual image, it is a complete experience that includes both physical and mental: sight, sound, smell, touch, taste, and feeling.

We use "reel" in place of "real" to easily identify a "created experience," as opposed to an "encountered experience." Create a Reel Experience for anything that you are programming. The brain can accept the Reel Experience as a reality. By investing the time to create a complete experience, you will have amplified the power of your mental programming.

To effectively store, program, or reprogram a Reel Experience depends on two factors:

1. REPETITION
2. QUALITY OF INPUT

POWERS OF REPETITION

Repetition may lay the groundwork to store

the idea, picture, or program; taking you toward the Reel Experience. Duplication of the mental image may help to reinforce and firmly imprint the numerous brain cells, to form the Reel Experience. Certainly, using repetition when learning has been successful for many years.

QUALITY OF INPUT

In the world of computer data processing, it's not the number of times you enter the data that counts. The major criterion for success is quality of input: the data must be entered perfectly. When we send an image of something we are looking at to the brain, we send a perfect image with, of course, some exceptions. The data is compared with the already stored data, for cataloging and placement. The things you see are considered a reality and are stored as fact. When there is a conflict with older stored data, the data is then reprocessed, and recorded as speculative.

When we want to reprogram our old belief structures, we send repetitive mental images of our new program to the brain. How the brain stores this new data depends on the quality of input and how it compares with previous data, either of which can weaken the success of our programming. If the data goes against our old program, it becomes speculative, for it is outside of our comfort zone. This can be overcome with better quality of input.

The quality can be amplified by improving our mental experience.

BUILDING HOLOGRAPHIC VISUAL IMAGES

Recall that we have been using the word "experience," and not visualization or picturing. For that which we call and desire as visualization is, in reality, an experience. When you are served a plate of spaghetti, the brain does not only record a visual picture, it also records: the heat coming from the plate; the smell of the sauce; the sound of the plate as it is placed on the table; and of course, the taste that will soon be recorded. What is recorded is not just sight, but the complete experience, including how we emotionally feel about the experience.

We might use a new word to describe the created experience. Because we internalize the experience, we could call the created experience "Innergization" instead of visualization.

Our slogan on the road to successful goal achievement will now be:

Good Observation Equals Good Innergization

VISUAL OBSERVATION

STEP 1: Visually observe the world around you.

Pay close attention to what you see, not only the object, person or scene, but the shadow it casts. Observe not only the color, but the shadows and highlights in certain areas, and of course, the space around the object, person or scene. You are establishing points of reference necessary to create your visual model.

AUDITORY OBSERVATION

Observe the sounds of the voices you may hear, not only the words being spoken, but also the little speech imperfections, such as the Uh-huhs, Hmmms, and Ahs. Notice the speed of the speech pattern, as well as the voice pitch.

Pay close attention to the sounds around you. Notice the little background sounds: the sounds of traffic, the automobiles as they pass; the sounds of the air conditioners, refrigerators, someone breathing, and the sound of your own breathing. These little details help create Holographic Innergization.

KINESTHETIC OBSERVATION

As we noted in Chapter One, the term "kinesthetic" encompasses the big four senses: smell, touch, taste and emotional feeling.

Odors and fragrances alter frequently, from one moment to the next. The outdoors may have the smell of the ocean, the smell of fish, or the woodsy smell of pine needles. The indoors may have the odor of food, ozone, or house pets. The delicate fragrance of perfume or the strong odor of perspiration all register in the brain to make up a Real Experience. When creating a Reel Experience, you will need to add the sense of smell.

Touch

Children use the sense of touch to gather data. Remember how they were always touching everything? Learn from the little ones, and go back to touching and evaluating the tactile sensations of your environment. Is it warm or cold, smooth or rough? Add and record the sense of touch. Recall to reach out and touch someone. Notice how it feels when they touch you, too.

Taste

The sense of taste is also included under the kinesthetic category. Take note of everything that you taste; the subtle and pungent register on your palate. A freshly-cut lemon, for example, may cause your mouth to water or salivate. Also, become aware of the distinguishing taste in your mouth when you are not eating. You may experience a bitter or acrid taste when you are disappointed. Notice that sweet taste of success after a sale, or when reaching a goal.

Emotions

There is no stronger motivating factor than emotional feelings, yet most of us rarely identify these feelings. Sense how you feel about events happening to you and around you. Identify how you feel when you see a puppy, a rat, or an attractive member of the opposite sex. Notice your emotional feelings when you see an accident, a rainbow, a rainy day, or a full moon. Notice your feelings when you meet a stranger, the boss, a relative, or a loved one. By identifying your feelings, you can add more pieces of "film" or points of reference for future Holographic Innergization.

You can vastly improve your effectiveness by establishing points of reference for all of your five senses, plus your emotional feelings. Take the time to PDR; that is, practice, drill and rehearse. Observe your world closely now, so that you will have clear memories to recall when you choose to create a Reel Experience, for a future, mental program.

HOLOGRAPHIC ENTERING OF DATA

The next step in Holographic Innergization was a major breakthrough. In my search to improve visualization, I knew I had the key—observation. The next step was to find a new way to put the key in the lock, and turn it. The answer came with my studies of Neuro Linguistic Programming. Everything began to fall into place. It was an answer so simple, and was only one step beyond standard NLP training. In fact, it's amazing someone did not discover it sooner.

You will recall that Chapter One stated; that, when we think a certain type of thought our eyes automatically go to a specific position. Eyes up and to our left when we are recalling visual data; and eyes up and to our right when we are constructing visual data. If our eyes go to a specific position automatically, when we are thinking a specific thought, then to easily enter new data, we can place our eyes in that position to create and enter a new thought, or Reel Experience.

ENTER DATA AT RELAXED LEVEL OF MIND

By consciously moving our eyes to a specific location, we can fool the brain into thinking that a real experience is actually happening.

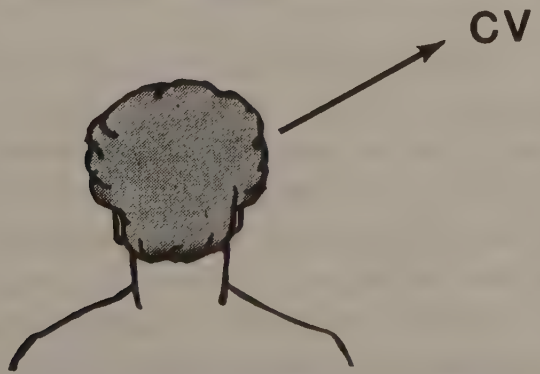

Taking this idea into consideration, we began to experiment and conduct research during our seminars. We found, not to our surprise, that the new data was most effective in making lasting changes when entered at a relaxed state of mind. Going to a state of physical and mental relaxation, facilitates the bypassing of much of the analytical behavior, thus making the entering of a Reel Experience easy.

HOLOGRAPHIC VISUAL INPUT

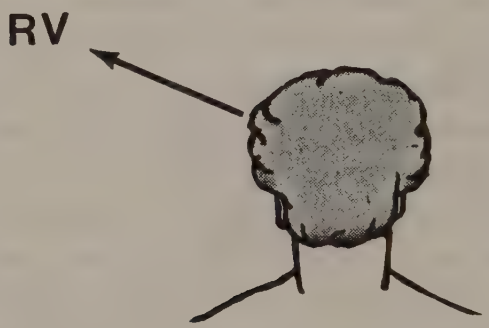

Decide what you want to input into your brain. What is your desired Reel Experience? It may be a future goal that you have had difficulty in obtaining, or a skill that's been eluding you. The first step is to close your eyes, and enter your relaxed level of mind with the Three to One Method.

After you have entered your relaxed level of mind and body, the next step will be to enter the picture, or visual, portion of your Holographic Innergization movie. You will place your eyes slightly up and to your right, keeping your eyelids closed.

While holding this position, create your visual track. Create an image, or thought, of exactly what the scene would look like if you were really there. Pay close attention to color and perspective. Take your time. Create the clothing that would be worn. Notice the fit, texture, and color. The more detail you interject, the stronger the image.

CHECKING VISUAL INPUT

After you have created a visual image to your satisfaction, check your input by moving your eyes up and to your left. Holding your eyes comfortably in this position, recall the scene. If the image comes into mental focus easily, you have entered a complete detailed image.

If there is difficulty in recalling your visual image, return your eyes up and to your right. Holding your eyes in this position, go back and add more points of reference to the picture. After you have added more details, you can move your eyes back to visual checking; up and to your left. You may repeat these operations as often as necessary. After you have created a few Holographic Innergizations, you will become more familiar with the process, and begin creating a visual image with one input.

Note: Some contact lens wearers, in the beginning, find it easier to remove their contacts while doing these exercises.

AUDITORY INPUT

The third step is to add the sound track. While at this same, relaxed level of mind with your eyelids closed, move your eyes to be "looking" toward your right ear. Holding your eyes in this position, you will create the sounds that you would hear, if you were really there.

Create the script; who said what. Create the speech patterns of the individual actors and actresses in your mental movie. Note the speed and pitch of the voices. Be sure to add background sounds; traffic, or air conditioner noises, etc.

CHECKING AUDITORY INPUT

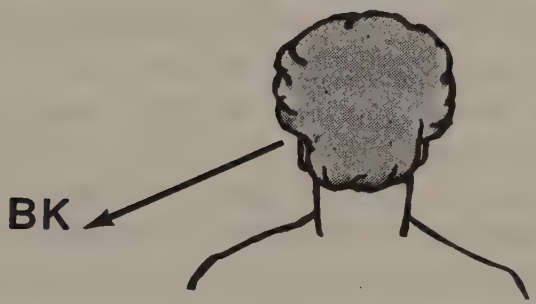

After completing your sound track to your satisfaction, you may conduct an internal check by moving your eyes toward your left ear. Do the sounds come easily? If so, proceed to kinesthetic input. If not, repeat the auditory input process.

KINESTHETIC INPUT

The kinesthetic mode is different from the visual and auditory input. In both the visual and auditory modes, the recall was located on your left, and the construct was on your right. It seems that in the kinesthetic mode, however, both recall and construct are in the same position.

Physical Sensations

While constructing the physical or body sensations, move your eyes down and to your left. Holding your eyes in this position, input physical data. Ask yourself,"If I were actually having this Reel Experience, what would be the temperature? How would the clothing feel on my body? The shoes on my feet? The contact lenses or glasses around my eyes?" and so on.

After you have completed the body sensations, you may check your input, by simply desiring to recall the data. If you do not recall the body sensations, again, add more data while your eyes are still down to the left.

Olfactory Input

After completing the body sensation input, return your eyes to the center position. Now move your eyes straight up to an upward angle of approximately ten degrees. Just move your eyes slightly up, as if you were looking at your sinus area. As you perform the input, your eyes will automatically center at the correct level, or angle.

While holding your eyes at this angle, create the odors and fragrances for the Reel Experience you've been programming. Check your progress by desiring to recall the smell input, while keeping your eyes at that upward angle. If your odor image is not complete, desire to construct, and add more points of reference to your olfactory mode.

Gustatory Input

The next sense to Reel Experience is the sense of taste. Return your eyes to the center position. Now move your eyes straight down about ten degrees below the horizontal plane of sight, as if you were looking at your mouth. Again, you do not have to be exactly at ten degrees.

With your eyes in this downward position, create the tastes you might sense if the event was an actual experience. It could include the steak of a celebration meal, or it could be the sweet taste of success.

Keeping your eyes in this same position, check your innergization by desiring to recall the taste. If more data is required, again, enter more data with your eyes in the same position.

Emotional Input

You have now Holographically Innergized the senses of sight and sound, as well as the kinesthetic modes. It is time to create the most powerful aspect—in order to make our movie come alive—emotion. Bring your eyes to center and then down to your right. Holding them in this position, mentally ask yourself,

"What kind of emotion will I feel as I reach my goal?" Will the feeling be one of pride, joy, satisfaction, ecstasy, or love? Determine the feeling and amplify it; turn up the emotional volume. Imagine this emotional feeling flowing through your entire body.

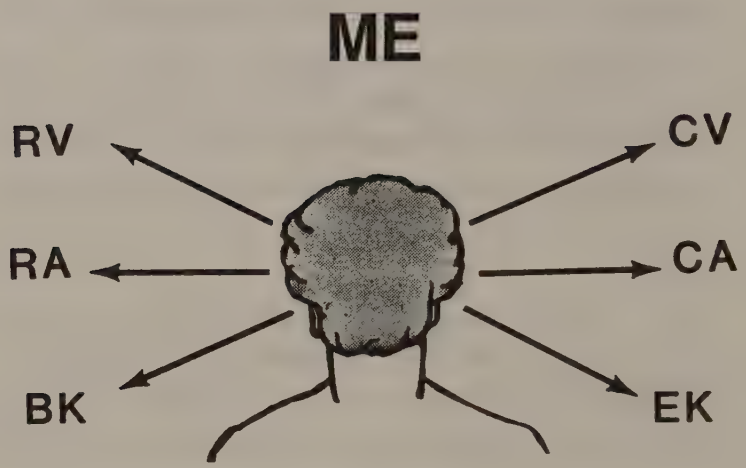

HOLOGRAPHIC INNERGIZATION

Holding onto the emotional feelings, move your eyes up and to your left, and add the visual track to the emotions. Next, move your eyes down toward your left ear, and add the sound track. Then move your eyes down and toward your left side, as you recall the physical feelings. Now center, then up ten degrees to add your olfactory track. Center and down about ten degrees for your sense of taste. Now run your entire program, keeping your Innergization dynamic with action and color.

Now you have the secret for Holographic Innergization. This is probably the first breakthrough in visualization or, Innergization, in many, many years. We have had great success with these Techniques in the Mind Mastery Seminar. Many students, with tears in their eyes, have described their first success with visualization after many years of failure.

With this new tool, you can set your goals, and attain them. Use the Holographic Innergization Technique, and have your inner conscious as your best friend in helping you to obtain success in all avenues and endeavors.

RV - Visual Recall (Eidetic) Images(eyes up left)
CV - Visual Constructed Images(eyes up right)
RA - Auditory Recall of Sounds or Words
(eyes horizontal and to the left)
CA - Auditory Constructed Sounds or Words
(eyes horizontal and to the right)
BK - Kinesthetic Feelings Body Sensation - Recall
(eyes down left)
EK - Kinesthetic Feelings Memory of Emotion—Recall
(eyes down right)

SMELL
Eyes Centered
10 degrees above center

TASTE
Eyes Centered
10 degrees below center

MENTAL DATA PROCESSING AND HOLOGRAPHIC VISUALIZATION SUMMARY

To create a Reel Experience when programming for a future goal, eliminating negative habits, fears, beliefs, or when developing a skill, follow these steps:

STEP 1: Close your eyes and enter a relaxed level of mind using the Three to One Method.

STEP 2: While at this relaxed level, turn your eyes up and to your right. Create visual images, adding color and action.

STEP 3: Check your images by turning your eyes up and to your left. If you easily recall the images, proceed to the next step; if not, repeat Step 2.

STEP 4: Now move your eyes as if you were looking at your right ear. Construct the sound track, incorporating music, conversation, and background sounds.

STEP 5: Check your auditory track by moving your eyes as if you were looking at your left ear. If you recall the sounds easily, proceed to the next step; if not, repeat Step 4.

STEP 6: Turn your eyes down and to your left side, and construct the physical body sensations that you will feel when you are actually having this experience. Keep your eyes in this same position, and check yourself by recalling these same body sensations. When you can recall easily, proceed to the next step.

STEP 7: Now move your eyes to your right, and in the down position. Construct the emotions that you will feel when you are actually in this imagined experience. To check your progress, keep your eyes in this same position, and desire to recall these emotions. When you can recall the emotions, move on to Step 8.

STEP 8: Move your eyes to the center position, and then up ten degrees to add the olfactory (smell) data. Check yourself by keeping your eyes in this same position.

STEP 9: Eyes centered and up ten degrees for gustatory (taste) input. Check yourself in this same eye position.

STEP 10: Now combine all of the sense modes together (sight, sound, smell, touch, taste, and emotion), for an entire Holographic Innergization process. Add Action, Color and Exaggeration—ACE.

STEP 11: Count out of your relaxed level from one to five; open your eyes, feeling fine and in perfect health.

INSTANT ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT

INSTANT ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT

ATTITUDE
The Ruler of Our World

Attitude—what is it, and how do you get a better one? You hear things like, "Susie has a bad attitude, I don't like to work with her," or, "Since John has changed his attitude, everybody likes him." Our attitudes can cause failure, depression, anger, a poor relationship, or even ill health. We will explore, and gather some understanding of the basis of a good or bad attitude, and learn two new Techniques for Instant Attitude Adjustment.

Recently, the marquee of a Holiday Inn read: "ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT HOUR 6 to 7." Their way of adjusting attitudes was drinks, two for one, at the bar. It's a sad state to see that people, coming away from the work place where they spend half their waking hours, have to adjust their attitude before going home.

Just what is an attitude, anyway? We might find the answer in Jumbo Jets. There is a unique instrument in the cockpit, which looks like something right out of Star Wars. It has a big fluorescent red, swept-back pair of wings floating over a black background, with a white grid that is obviously the ground, and a blue area which represents the sky. If you ask the navigator about the instrument, you will be told that this instrument measures the attitude of the plane, not the altitude. The attitude is the relationship of the plane to the ground, not how high it is. The question is, does the plane lean its left wing or its right wing toward the ground, or is the plane level with the ground?

This might be an easy way to define attitude. We might define attitude as your relationship to something. Do you lean toward it or are you leaning away from it?

Examine your attitudes. Does your attitude lean toward where you want to go, or are you leaning away from what you want? These answers are not always easy to find. Inner beliefs are not always apparent. Many times we might try something new and fail, for seemingly no reason.

If your inner beliefs are against your outer goals, you will react in a negative manner when you approach your success. That negative response could be called a bad attitude. Whether it's a fear of success or a fear of failure, the bottom line is the same. Anything outside of your inner, preset comfort zone will be rejected.

Our comfort zones have been formed from our attitudes since birth. We have gathered information from the world around us, and from this data we decided who and what we are. Much of this information (beliefs) was fed to us by our "teachers," both in and out of school, our loved ones, and our religious leaders.

These people loved us, and cared about our future, but their opinions were formed by their teachers, and so on. Much of the data handed down to us was out of date, no longer true. Some of the "facts" only applied to our teachers, not to us at all, and some information was never even true in the first place. Yet we govern our lives around a false set of opinions.

As time goes by, we begin to box ourselves in. These wrong ideas create a safety, or comfort, zone. As long as our actions stay within a prescribed manner, we are comfortable. Any new action is outside our comfort zone; a new adventure is not like us, our mind will do all in its power to get back within our personal comfort zone. If new problems, goals, or projects are outside our comfort zone, we can develop a "bad" attitude toward the project.

ATTITUDE AFFECTS THE MASTER SCRIPT

Attitudes deal with previously recorded opinions about the world. We each have created our own "Master Script" of life. Unfortunately, we, and our teachers, have often created a negative "Master Script".

In a sense, we have made a mental video tape, our drama called life! We play the same negative tape over and over. The tape is triggered by any number of experiences. A negative attitude tape could be triggered by: a word, or series of words; a song played in the distant background; a scene; event, or happening; the tactile feeling of an object; or an emotional reaction. These negative "Master Script" tapes come in all shapes, sizes,and emotions.

A simple negative tape may be, "Oh, how I hate to get up in the morning." This little tape will start the day on a negative note, and as you soon find out, it can set the failure rate for the next day, week, month, or career.

Other negative tapes may be: "I can't spell." This can cause a fear of advancement, where you may be "found out." "I can't remember." This can cause you to stay away from anything new. You may have a fear that you can't learn or understand the job.

The list goes on and on. "I don't know enough." "I'm not worthy." "I don't have the experience," or "I don't like . . . ." All of these are self-destructive, negative attitude tapes.

The important question is: How do we escape the constant playing of a negative tape?

HOW TO CORRECT A NEGATIVE "MASTER SCRIPT" TAPE

The Instant Attitude Adjustment Technique uses a visual image to make the change from negative to positive. Because the process is extremely simple, some have a tendency to overlook this valuable tool. The process is in four parts:

A. First, identify that you are "IN" a negative taped behavior. Recognition of the problem is the first step to success. Stay on constant guard against any repeated negative behavior.

B. Imagine that you have a video cassette of the event playing in your head. By using a simple mental image, or symbol, you have encapsulated the problem into an easily handled project.

C. Pretend to pull out the tape from your forehead area. Stop the tape. When you stop the tape you stop the behavior. The symbol sent to the inner conscious is often enough to take care of the problem. The use of symbols or mental images can correct your thinking toward success.

D. Create a new positive tape of yourself performing the positive behavior, easily and successfully. Imagine plugging in a new positive tape, in keeping with your chosen "Master Script" or Reel Experience. As an example, instead of: "Oh, how I hate to get up in the morning," plug in "Oh, what a beautiful and exciting day for the adventure of life."

This Technique is not only easy, it is also fun to use, and is extremely effective.

UNDERSTANDING DEPRESSION AND REJECTION

It is easy to say, "Change your attitude if it is negative." That change, however, in many cases, is only made in the outer conscious level. People soon turn to negative behavior patterns in a short span, or worse yet, they can't even initially make the change.

No one wants to be depressed or rejected, yet, at times, it seems to be unavoidable. Depression is sweeping the nation in epidemic proportions, and it is attacking two women to every one man. And, most often, we do not usually understand why we are depressed. In order to break this destructive loop, it helps to have some understanding of how the brain processes data.

NEW BREAKTHROUGH IN MENTAL DATA PROCESSING

Some interesting theories, by Dr. Gordon H. Bower of Stanford University, have been advanced. His research points to three areas of mental processing.

1. A person's feelings act like a selective filter, that is tuned into incoming material, that supports or justifies those feelings. The filter admits material that agrees with the perceivers' mood, and it casts aside material that does not agree. This filtering process is important, for it determines how material is initially stored in the memory banks.

2. Emotional feelings affect what data a person can retrieve from memory. People best retrieve events originally learned in a particular mood by reinstating, or returning to, that same mood.

3. There are strong, emotional influences pulling on our thinking and judgments. People's social perceptions, as well their imaginative fantasies, are subjective; they are easily influenced by their mood of the moment. These influences occur whenever people evaluate their friends, themselves, their business situations, and their future.

With Dr. Bower's research in mind, it seems that we store information according to our feelings. In order to effectively recall those memories, we need to re-establish those feelings.

The topic of state-dependent learning has been examined by many researchers across the globe. It took the work of Dr. Bower to formulate a tool to control our inner reactions.

Taking our cue from Dr. Bower, we might say that brain processing could be compared to two separate filing cabinets; one to store negative feeling records, and a totally separate filing cabinet that contains positive feeling records. To open, or to easily access each cabinet, we must feel the emotion associated with that filing system.

This information will give you some idea that, when you are expressing an emotion, depression for example, you only have access to the negative record cabinet. The only memories that you can easily access are records in the loop of negative feelings.

So, a simple negative event, a newspaper headline or a negative mental tape, such as, "Oh, how I hate to get up in the morning," or a favorite song, like, "The Way We Were," could trigger negative thinking. Now, you can understand why, when we are depressed, it is not easy to change the mood.

When you are in a negative mood, you can only easily recall the failures and negative events in your life. You have that feeling of, "No one has ever done a nice thing for me; nobody loves me, everybody hates me. I think I'll go out and eat worms." Try as you may, you cannot think of a happy event in your life. You are stuck in your negative filing cabinet.

Often a valuable employee is fired in a spur-of-the-moment disagreement. Their superior finds something wrong, and the problem points to a particular employee. The supervisor, in the negative filing cabinet, tries to recall when this employee has done anything right. As his mind searches the file, nothing is found. Of course, all the good points of this employee are in the positive file, mentally out of reach, at this moment, to the supervisor. The wrong decision is reached—fire that person!

How many marriages, partnerships, and careers have been destroyed because of being in the negative filing cabinet?

WHY POSITIVE MENTAL ATTITUDE WORKS

For many years, the leaders of "The Positive Mental Attitude Movement" have told us that if we think positive, good things will happen to us. And of course, it often seems to hold true. You have seen many "positive thinkers" rise to the top of the success ladder. To explain this phenomenon, many have used the metaphysical approach. Yet, the work of Dr. Bower gives us the scientific answer.

For the first time, we have some scientific validation and understanding as to why a positive mental attitude works. When you are thinking positive; in a happy confident frame of mind, you have access to all of your successful experiences. When presented with a problem while in a positive mood, you will recall all the successful solutions to similar problems of the past. Thereby, increasing the chances of a successful solution.

When in a negative mood, and faced with a problem, you search your memory for a solution, but you will only access failure memories. The chances of a successful solution are doubtful.

Attitude swings occur in all walks of life. From about the age of seven until death, we are ruled by our attitudes.

CONTROLLING MOOD SWINGS IN SALES

The profession of sales is plagued by mood swings. Let's use George, a salesperson, as our example:

George: "I do great when I've just made a sale. On the next call I seem to say all the right things. But boy, do I have bad days, and sometimes it stretches into bad weeks. Sometimes I get where I don't want to make a call. I just know I'm going to say the wrong thing, and take a chance of not only blowing the sale, but I stand the chance of losing a customer."

George is accessing negative files. This is a common problem in sales. The clients' reply of "No" triggers rejection—negative feelings, negative memories, and, George had "foot-in-mouth disease." He only accesses his failures and negative experiences. It is a downhill race for George, unless he has a tool to break out of the trap. Many, successful sales careers have been destroyed by this negative loop.

THE SECRET OF INSTANT ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT

Understanding the negative loop brings us to the question, "How do we switch from the negative filing cabinet to the positive cabinet?"

The key to escaping from a negative mood to a positive mood is the use of a verbal trigger mechanism. The use of a "magic word" that will act as a mental trigger to springboard us into a positive mood.

To set up and input the trigger into our brain, we need to recall a positive experience dealing with a specific challenge. First, recall a positive event from the past; a successful happening where there was a positive outcome. It is important that you select your positive experience in advance. Waiting to set up a trigger until you are in your negative cabinet is far too late.

In George's case, the challenge is sales rejection.

Step 1: George will recall one or more positive sales' successes. Especially a sale where George said the right thing to make the sale; an event where George was directly responsible for making the sale.

Step 2: George will enter Level One with the Three to One Method. At Level One he will recall: how he was dressed on that occasion; how his customer was dressed; what the room looked like—the color, position of the furniture, etc. George, still at a relaxed level, will now replay the actual memory of the event, recalling as much that was said as possible. And, he will establish how he felt at that moment of success.

Step 3: After enjoying the replaying of this event, he will come out of Level, counting from one to five. Then George will select a trigger word; a made-up word to trigger or remind him of this positive event.

Step 4: George will again enter Level with the Three to One Method, and replay the positive event once again. However, this time, adding any more remembered details. While at Level, he will tell himself, "Every time in the future that I use the trigger word (insert word), I will recall this positive experience." He will then come out of Level.

In the future, when George feels rejection, he can concentrate on or say aloud his trigger word to center his mind back to the positive memory banks, thereby changing his file for processing data, and changing his attitude as well. Success will now come easily for George, for he can act rather than react. He is in charge of his emotions.

DEFEAT DEPRESSION

The Instant Attitude Technique is also successful in defeating the Blue Funk Monster of depression. This negative feeling has sent millions of people spiraling down into the FIDS—the Fear of Impending Doom. FIDS, such as worry and depression, are all just negative expectations.

When in this negative mood, we expect the very worst to happen. We mentally equip ourselves for disaster. And of course, we enter the negative filing cabinet for the answers. Every solution we find is based upon a failure, thus taking us deeper and deeper into self-pity. The final solution for some who are deeply depressed is suicide.

The Instant Attitude Adjustment Technique can be the answer to start you back on the road to happiness and success.

Prepare yourself in advance. Create a mental broadsword to defeat the depression monster. At a relaxed level, recall an experience in the past: where you felt confident and secure; a positive experience,or happy moment when you felt loved. Expand this experience with your Holographic Innergization, incorporation sight, sound, smell, touch, taste, and emotional feelings.

If you do not recall enough details, create a real, Reel Experience. If the depression mode has been a big challenge for you, be sure to relive your positive experience at your relaxed level of mind, three times daily for seven days. This reinforcement will give you armor strong enough to defeat even the largest Blue Funk Monster.

Any negative mood can be conquered using this Technique. You will enjoy creating a new trigger for each problem area.

SUMMARY
INSTANT ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT

A. Recall a positive event or experience where the success was dependent upon your actions.

B. Enter Level One with the Three to One Method. At Level One, recall the scene in detail. Add all the points of reference for the Holographic Innergization.

C. While at Level, replay the actual event in detail, recalling as much that was said as possible. Establish the feeling of this moment of success.

D. Select a trigger word, a made-up word to remind you of, or to trigger this positive event.

E. Remaining at Level, replay the positive event; however, this time adding any more remembered details. Tell yourself, "Every time I use the trigger word (insert word), I will easily recall, and enjoy the feeling of this positive experience." And then, come out of Level.

F. Any time you need a mood or attitude change, all you need to do is to concentrate on or say your trigger word. And you will be on your road to positive success.

On the following pages we have work sheets. The first section points out some of the areas for which you might want to record trigger words. Be sure to fill out the Verbal Trigger Success Forms to keep a record of your successes, as well.

INSTANT ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT
CREATE A PERSONAL VERBAL TRIGGER FOR MAJOR AREAS

Copy these basic areas on a sheet of loose-leaf paper and keep a record of your trigger words, and the results of your programs

BASIC AREAS

Emotional Improvements	Personal	Physical
Business	Self-Confidence	Creativity
Fear	Mental	Spiritual
Social	Public Speaking	Memory
Depression		Family Financial

SPECIAL AREAS

Sales	Production	Idea
Creativity	Problem Solving	Relationships

VERBAL TRIGGER SUCCESS FORMS

Be sure to keep a record of your successes. A daily or weekly review of your successes will help keep you in the positive success mode. Copy the following data for your loose-leaf Success Log.

DATE

AREA

POSITIVE EVENT

POINTS OF REFERENCE
Details for Holographic Visualization

Location

Colors

Your Clothing

Fragrance

Witness

Sound

Witness' Clothing

Taste

Emotional Feeling

Temperature

Other Details

TRIGGER WORD

NUMBER OF TIMES PROGRAMMED TRIGGER

PER DAY

WEEK

MAGIC TRIGGERS OF THE MIND

MAGIC TRIGGERS OF THE MIND

THE SECRET OF LUCKY CHARMS

Have you ever had a lucky pocket piece, a lucky suit or dress, or a lucky feeling? Science has long turned a deaf ear to the matter of a lucky item. Yet, we find many, different lucky charms advertised, and used by thousands of people.,

THE LUCKY, MONEY DRAWING CANDLE

While in Laredo, Texas, to present The Mind Mastery Seminar for the Silva International Convention, I noticed a "religious candle" section in the Laredo Supermarket. On the same shelf, alongside the religious candles, was a "Lucky, Money Drawing Candle." I thought, "Who would believe that burning that candle will bring money?" Then I noticed, by the empty spaces, the store had sold quite a few.

Okay, so the candles work, or at least people who bought them believed they would work. At this point, I picked up a Lucky, Money Drawing Candle and put it in my basket. Later, at home, I examined the candle. It was covered with lucky symbols—shamrocks, four-leaf clovers, and horseshoes. It also had pictures of items of value, such as diamond rings, fur coats (in Texas?), and new, shiny cars.

It suddenly came to me that this candle would work! Burn the candle, look into the flame, think of the things you want, and these items will come to you. The Lucky, Money Drawing was a combination trigger mechanism and goal-setting tool. Like most lucky items, the lucky candle will work, if you make it work. It was a fixation point, a trigger for positive expectancy, to help the user lean toward success.

THE LUCKY SUIT

Lucky items are used and accepted by the nation's leaders in the world of business and industry. Lucky charms come in all shapes and sizes, from the well-known rabbit's foot to the lucky coin or pocket piece. Sometimes, even an article of clothing is considered to be a lucky charm.

In the "Color Dynamics Seminar," by lecturer/writer Judith L. Powell, you learn the significance of wearing a specific color of clothing to evoke a specific reaction. While discussing these principles with one of the nation's top salespersons, James Clark, we found that he disagreed with one of the basic points—the color brown is not a good color for a salesperson.

According to the research in John T. Malloy's book, Dress for Success (first edition), brown is a color worn by servants. Advice given by a person wearing brown will, for the most part, be ignored.

My friend, Jim, said that this was all wrong. He had a brown suit that he wore when he had a big meeting, or a big sale to make. He called it his "lucky suit," because when he wore this suit he almost always made the sale. Upon further investigation, I found out that this was a custom-made suit. When he first had this suit made he had a big sales appointment, and of course, he wore his new brown, suit. Jim looked and felt good in his suit.

As you will understand from reading the "Instant Attitude Adjustment" Section, the new suit put him in his positive filing cabinet. He said all the right things, and consequently made one of the largest sales in his career. The brown suit became a trigger for a positive event, a positive feeling which put him in his successful data cabinet mode. The suit, regardless of the color, became a positive trigger for success. It was Jim's lucky suit.

Just as Jim created a positive trigger mechanism by accident, you can also create personal "lucky" items by studying and applying the principles of trigger mechanism.

As an interesting update to the "brown suit metaphor," in the newest edition, the NEW Dress for Success, Malloy's latest research shows brown suits now test "Okay" for success wearing. Malloy believes this change in acceptance was brought about when President Reagan began wearing brown suits.

WHAT IS A TRIGGER MECHANISM?

DEFINITION: A trigger mechanism is a physical act, sound, or happening which incites, stimulates, or influences a related action, emotion, or conditioned response.

You are surrounded by triggers, from the simple "stop sign" to the cry of a baby. You automatically react to a signal of one sort or another.

You are conditioned by Madison Avenue's advertising agencies with verbal and visual triggers: "Aren't you hungry?"; "The real thing"; "Where's the beef?" These are just a few examples of how a simple phrase can be programmed to cause a response. We are programmed, like Pavlov's dogs.

In Pavlov's experiments, every time the dog was fed, a bell was rung, thereby associating or linking the sound of the bell with feeding. After just a short time of this conditioning, the sound of the bell, without the food being given, was enough to trigger the dog to salivate.

In this Section, we will examine how positive trigger mechanisms can ring a bell to put your success program into action.

CONTROLS AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

The use of trigger mechanisms can be very effective to program and reprogram ourselves and others. One of the most used trigger mechanisms in the Silva Basic Lecture Series (BLS) is called the Three Fingers Technique, which is used as a trigger to improve recall, producing a better memory. In the "Stress and Relaxation" Chapter, you learned two additional finger controls: The Thumbnail Technique for instant relaxation, and The Thumb Stroke Technique for relieving stress. You will also learn how to program verbal triggers, to instantly clarify your thinking processes. Trigger mechanisms are powerful tools for obtaining better qualities of personal and business lives.

SELF-DEFEATING TRIGGERS

Triggers can be negative as well as positive. Little annoying things can trigger anger. Stress, tension, lack of the proper nutrition and rest can springload you to blowing your top.

The attack of the Blue Funk Monster of depression can be due to listening to our "favorite" songs. Sad songs, songs of losing a love, and songs about breaking up a relationship can, and often do, trigger depression and defeat. You don't even have to listen attentively. Just the music softly playing in the background can trigger negative thinking.

Much of our daily information received is negative. From the casual remarks about the weather to our daily newspaper, we are being assailed with negative programs. These negative thoughts can trigger failure. Look around your life. How many triggers are causing you to react rather than stepping back to reassess the situation? Assess your habits, your speech patterns, and expressions. Are you saying things that trigger negative behavior in yourself and everyone around you? Clean up your thoughts and expressions, and notice the change in your world.

THE SECRETS OF SUCCESSFUL TRIGGERS

A. NEED. The advertising agencies' most successful campaign deals with basic needs or fears.

B. SIMPLICITY. Your triggers should be easy to do, or something you see or hear several times a day.

C. DEEP PROGRAMMING. The trigger is most effective when embedded at the inner conscious level, the Alpha Level.

D. DESIRE, BELIEF, AND EXPECTANCY. Of course, these are the three keys to any successful program.

NEED

You might look upon "need" as the true motivating factor, for "need is the mother of invention." Psychologist Dr. George De Sau says, "Many people, on the inner conscious level, refuse success." It is not the old fear of failure that stops many from being successful, but rather the fear of success. Do you have the "need" for success?

SIMPLICITY

K.I.S.S. is the answer. That stands for "Keep It Simple, Sweetheart." Some of the most effective triggers are simple, everyday items or actions. The blinking of the eyes, was the successful trigger used by George Maycock to regain his vision. The throwing of a light switch was effective to help another student improve his hearing. Silva Instructor, Betty Perry, uses speed limit signs as a trigger to remind her to reduce, and then maintain her perfect weight. These simple triggers are very effective when used properly.

DEEP PROGRAMMING

George Maycock wanted to improve his vision. The need was great, for he was considered almost blind. In addition to doing eye exercises, he embedded a trigger mechanism at the Alpha Level for deeper programming. His trigger was the blinking of his eyes. At the Alpha Level he programmed, "Each time I blink my eyes, my vision will improve." Mr. Maycock has thrown away his glasses, for he now has almost perfect vision. George also applied desire, belief, and expectancy to his programming. His success was speeded up by entering his program at the deep, relaxed levels of mind and body.

For years, people have used positive statements to reprogram a negative belief, or to bring about a goal. Affirmative statements were written and spoken, over and over, with mixed results. The continuous writing of the statement was helpful in getting the information at a deeper level, but most often, not deep enough to be of any immediate or lasting value.

Jose' Silva was the first to effectively use, and teach, deep levels of relaxation to reprogram the mind. By relaxing the mind and body, you can open the door to the inner conscious mind.

The inner conscious mind was formerly called, the subconscious. "Sub" means below and "conscious" means controlled awareness. The earlier scientists believed that each individual could not control the subconscious. Today, that control is available at the deep, relaxed levels of mind and body.

Practice your deep level mental training exercise that is in the "Stress and Relaxation" Section, every day. The more you practice, the faster and easier you will be able to enter these deep levels. Keep in mind that this mental exercise is the door to opening the mind for your control and success.

DESIRE, BELIEF AND, EXPECTANCY

The "D," "B," and "E" are the mainstays of really effective programming. Be aware that it is possible that you have programmed yourself, or others, without the "D," "B," and "E" on your part. However, if you want your personal and business lives to prosper, the understanding and utilization of the basics of programming will produce fast, successful results.

DESIRE

Desire is your motivating factor. Successful programming is like a radio, nothing will happen unless you turn it on. It is desire that flips the switch.

There is a difference between desire and just wanting. Many people, companies, and even giant corporations "want" to improve. Yet only a few will put forth the necessary work to change or stop a negative pattern. In fact, a way to measure desire might be to ask yourself if you are willing to do the necessary work to create your desired end result.

Many people, faced with a really difficult problem, just fold up their tent, and sneak away into the night. It is so easy to pick up the paper, turn to the "Want Ad" Section and look for a new employee, a new job, a new company, or a new corporation. How many marriages and relationships have failed, simply because of the lack of effort put forth to make it work? You must have the desire to succeed.

BELIEF

Belief, for many, is almost a mystical concept. It's the staying power that most have, but never use. That famous saying, "When the going gets tough, the tough get going!" was never more true than today. Our world is no longer that easy. We find more and more challenges each day. Belief in the successful future of our world, our relationships, our company, or our jobs spells out our success or our failure. Belief is our sustaining factor until we reach our goal.

EXPECTANCY

DESIRE gets us going, BELIEF keeps us going, and EXPECTANCY gets us there. You must truly expect to become successful in obtaining what it is you desire. You have already learned that the brain must receive "real" images in order to make the necessary changes to reach your goal. If you don't expect success, you will send strong images of doubt to the brain, and the brain will reject the "reel" movie data of your desired goal.

As you prepare your trigger mechanism, remember that it will be far more effective if you truly expect it to work. In fact, if you have strong desire, belief, and expectancy, it will work!

THE LAST STEP

Your last step is to add quality of input and repetition. As you implant your trigger, use a detailed Innergization process, adding sight, sound, smell, touch, taste, and emotional feelings. Make these details as strong as possible for the Reel Experience. Repetition of your trigger input will help overcome those years of negative programming. You might also choose to review the information on quality of input and repetition in the "Mental Data Processing" Section.

By applying the above rules, defining your goals, then creating and using your triggers, you will have made a major step toward a personal, better and better world.

TRIGGER MECHANISMS

The following are some suggested trigger mechanisms. Write in a different goal for each trigger. Remember you increase your success by developing a strong "D," "B," and "E."

TRIGGER MECHANISM CONSTRUCTION

EACH TIME I BLINK MY EYES, MY...
EACH TIME I FLIP A LIGHT SWITCH, I WILL...
EACH TIME I HEAR THE PHONE RING, I WILL...
EACH TIME I SEE A VAN, I WILL...

EACH TIME I (take a specific action) I WILL...
EACH TIME I... I WILL...

Recall to fill out a Success Log sheet for each positive response to your triggers.

SUCCESS LOG

DATE

TRIGGER

GOAL DESIRED

NUMBER OF TIMES PROGRAMMED

DAY

WEEK

MONTH(S)

RESULTS

ALPHA TIME MANAGEMENT

ALPHA TIME MANAGEMENT

The successful person must manage and use his or her time wisely. It is not true that everyone has exactly the same number of hours per day. The "Alpha Time Manager" has a definite advantage in that the inner mind is not ruled by man-made time. Data can be filed, recalled, and mentally examined with little effort and in less time using these Techniques.

ALPHAMATIC TECHNIQUE

Alpha Time Managers can easily increase their effectiveness by inserting a positive statement or program, each time they go to the relaxed level. Impressing a positive program, called an "Alphamatic,"at the relaxed level of mind, can make fast and easy improvements in your life.

ALPHA SPEED READING

Speed reading is a good example of a goal to work toward. In one day, you can increase your reading, comprehension, and speed. The Speed Reading Alphamatic might be:

"Each day, I read faster, and comprehend more."

As you say this Alphamatic slowly, three times at Level One, use your Holographic Innergization Technique to create a Reel Experience. Picture yourself reading faster, and comprehending more. Later, after you have come out of the Alpha Level and have the opportunity to read something, push yourself to read faster. Move along, skipping any small words that may slow you down. To put it simply—read faster. You will be amazed how easily and quickly you will read, while comprehending more.

Using the "Alphamatic Insert Technique," you can alter or modify any areas you would like to improve. Create your own personal Alphamatic statements for all changes you would like to make in your life. BE SURE to make the Alphamatic statement positive—what you want—NOT what you don't want.

ALPHA TIME MANAGER'S MENTAL PLANNING

By following the daily procedure below, you will decrease stress, become more self-confident, have better control of situations, and less time will be required in making successful decisions.

Morning Program

You would not go out of the house physically undressed. By the same token, you should not go out of the house in the morning, mentally undressed.

Each morning, upon awakening, enter Level One with the Three to One Method.

At Level One, review the solutions or thoughts that you have received during the night in the forms of dreams or insights. Analyze how this information relates to the overall Master Script.

Dress your mind for the day, by previewing your workday. Go over your preplanned appointments and decisions that must be made for that day. Concentrate on areas that might prove challenging for you. Use your Holographic Innergization to create a Reel Experience of that future event or appointment, projecting a positive outcome.

CREATE A MASTER SCRIPT FOR THE DAY OR EVENT

Those areas that might prove to be challenging should be previewed in great detail, almost as if you were writing a script for a play. First, decide what is the outcome you desire. Imagine yourself in the meeting, and ask yourself what points will be brought up. You have predetermined the outcome, write the script accordingly. Decide exactly what the dialogue might sound like. Plan each question and each answer, keeping your desired outcome in mind.

Using a self-improvement Alphamatic, slowly repeat it three times, while at the same time, using Holographic Innergization, for success. Then count out of your relaxed level from one to five. (See "Stress and Relaxation" Section.)

Afternoon Program

After lunch, arrange your schedule to allow enough time to go to Level, before you continue your work. Five minutes is good; ten minutes is very good; fifteen minutes at a relaxed level is excellent.

Enter Level One with the Three to One Method. At Level One, review your day so far. Review the morning's events. How did the morning progress? Are there areas that you would have liked to have handled differently?

If so, mentally replay the event, and rewrite the script. Play the scene in your mind the way you would have liked it to go. Create a Reel Experience of this scene. The final impression should be the correct idea, so that in the future you will, when confronted with a similar situation, have already sorted and mentally accessed the correct response. Thus, you will have a positive, successful memory stored in your brain neurons.

Now preview the remainder of the day. Picture each appointment as being successful for all parties concerned.

Insert the same self-improvement Alphamatic, or a new one. Repeat it three times, while using Holographic Innergization, for greater success.

Count out of your relaxed level, from one to five.

Evening Program

At night, before going to sleep, undress your mind by reviewing your day.

A balanced person would not go to sleep with their clothes on, nor go to sleep with their mind dressed. To enjoy a restful night's sleep, you must undress your mind, cast off the cares and problems of the day.

Enter Level One with the Three to One Method, while lying in bed or sitting up in a chair.

Review your day. Again, pay close attention to any areas that could have been handled more efficiently. Write a mental script, a Reel Experience, on how this situation should have been handled. The memory of the new scenario will be filed for future reference.

Insert a self-improvement Alphamatic, slowly repeating it three times, while using Holographic Innergization for success.

Reel Experience anything that you desire for the future, such as goals. Remember to create extensively detailed pictures.

Program that ideas or solutions to problems will come to you during sleep.

There is no need to come out of our relaxed level, since it's bedtime. If you are conducting your programming while lying in bed, just drift off to sleep.

Using this Alpha Level three times each day, you will find that your day will go smoother and easier. The time invested at your relaxed level of mind will give you confidence and mental organization skills. Do this daily and you will become a successful Alpha Time Manager.

A DYNAMIC MANAGEMENT TOOL
THE PAD AND POINTS PROGRAM

The following, almost mechanical action, gets remarkable results for its simplicity. It makes you feel confident in your contacts with others. Apply it at once, to multiply your influence in all of your personal and business relationships.

Before you meet with anyone, jot down on a pad, the points you want to cover.

This sounds so simple, and it is! However, very few people take the time to clarify their thoughts. The electrifying effects of the Pad and Points Program will amaze them.

PAD AND POINTS FOR THE EMPLOYEE

Pad and Points works wonders with your boss. Most bosses have much to do during the average workday and many are impatient with people who come into their offices to "talk things over."

Next time you need to see the boss, first go to the Alpha Level, relax, then examine the situation mentally. Clarify your thinking and pretend to write down the points to be covered. Program how you want the conversation to go between you and your boss. Go through a Reel Experience, then open your eyes and physically write down the points you went over in your mind.

With pad and points in hand, walk into your boss's office, hold up the pad with each point numbered and circled, and say, "I have (insert number) things to go over when you have time." It works like magic.

Any boss, no matter how busy, will try to give a few minutes if they see that you have evaluated the problem up to the point where action can be taken.

Most employees go to their bosses for help without any recommendation of their own for them to consider; without any clear-cut questions. They simply barge in and announce a topic: "About that new schedule letter—it's got to go out soon. I've been wondering what we should do about it."

The Pad and Points Program shows that you are in command of the situation. Essentially, it gives the boss something tangible, and allows them to pass judgment on what you think should be done. You get action that speeds up your effectiveness so that you stand out from other employees and are welcomed in the boss's office as well. This program has earned many promotions and raises for its users.

PAD AND POINTS FOR THE BOSS

Always have your Pad and Points ready before you make any type of phone call. Never make a phone call without first jotting down the areas to be discussed. Whether it is a business call, a personal call, or a call to straighten out an invoice, clarify your thinking first.

Writing down your thoughts after you have gone to Level, sums up in your own mind just what the phone call is to accomplish. It changes your whole manner when you make a call with your pad and points in front of you.

You are well organized and you know it; the other person senses your firm hold on things and is more responsive. It also saves the time, expense, and embarrassment of calling back to cover the points you've forgotten.

IMPROVE CORRESPONDENCE

Use the Pad and Points Program before composing a personal or business letter. Again, go to the Alpha Level and mentally list the concepts you wish the letter to contain. Then mentally formulate the letter—pretend that you are at the desk, computer, or typewriter actually writing or typing the letter; or pretend that you are dictating the letter to your secretary.

Next, count out of Level and physically dictate, write, or type the letter you composed in your mind.

DECISION MAKING WITH PAD AND POINTS

The Pad and Points Program will also be helpful in decisionmaking.

STEP 1: IDENTIFY THE PROBLEM. You must get down to the absolute basics here. In order to give you enough information to identify the problem, you must gather all relevant data and write it on your pad. Think in terms of what information, in the form of opinions, attitudes, facts, etc., you will need to understand all facets of the problem.

As much information as possible should be first-hand. Whether people intend to or not, sometimes vital facts may be distorted or deleted. Try to confirm the data by checking more than one source, and write down their name next to that point on your pad.

Sometimes, what looks like one problem is really two or more. Each part may have to be solved separately, but care must be taken that the solutions complement each other.

STEP 2: POSSIBLE COURSES OF ACTION. All possible solutions should be listed on your pad, as briefly as possible. Remember to list your ideas as well as others', such as your mental board members in your brainstorming session.

STEP 3: LIST CONSEQUENCES OF EACH COURSE OF ACTION. For each action, you must explore what the possible results might be. Be specific and write down on your pad, the costs and changes necessary to implement the idea.

STEP 4: ADOPT AND APPLY THE CHOSEN SOLUTION. Once you have decided what you are going to do, you will follow through. You will choose to pay close attention to details of its implementation, and check at regular intervals to be sure that it is working as planned.

At first, you may feel that the use of these four steps may slow down your decision-making process; however, with a little time and practice, the Pad and Points Program will become largely automatic, and you will increase your efficiency and reliability in solving problems as an "Alpha Pad and Points Manager."

PRACTICE

You will find many more uses for the Pad and Points Technique, as you begin to put it into practice. In fact, use this Technique for ten days. It will immediately give you a feeling of confidence, bring you a dynamic, new power and a newfound influence over all your relationships.

Five hints for using the Pad and Points Program.

1. Keep a few pads handy, perhaps one by each telephone, and large ones on your work desk and by your favorite easy chair.

2. State at the top of the sheet what the main objective of the contact is; the goal for which you are using this Technique.

3. Go to the Alpha Level and quickly, mentally rehearse each point on your pad before you meet the contact. More points may creatively come to you at Level. Write them down when you count out of your relaxed level.

4. Meet the contact and follow what you have written down. It may seem that you memorized the point; however, be sure to refer to the list—that is part of the image that will impress your contact.

Here is a list of situations where the Pad and Points Program makes the greatest impact:

1. Consulting with the boss
2. Buying a house, boat, car, or life insurance

3. Seeing your child's teacher
4. Getting a bank loan
5. Having someone do a job in your home
6. Seeing the doctor or dentist
7. Making a phone call
8. Evaluating an employee
9. Conducting a meeting
10. Selling something or yourself
11. Getting your car repaired
12. Talking with someone in your family
13. Organizing a fund drive, holiday party, or seminar
14. Writing a letter

Become better and better by using the Pad and Points Program at every opportunity. You will gain attention, cooperation, and respect.

SAMPLE PADS AND POINTS

Mr. Shields, a supervisor in the shipping department, is clarifying his thinking before being interviewed by his boss, Mr. Albert, the company vice president.

1. Contact: Mr. Albert
2. Objective: To get Mr. Albert's okay on a new shipping carton that will reduce breakage in transit.

Points to cover:

1. Breakage is running 8%—extremely high
2. The trouble is the carton—should use tough "honey-combed" carton
3. Have tested new carton—banged it around, dropped it, thrown it against the wall, but no breakage
4. Have tried new carton for 100 trial shipments. No problems in handling or returns for breakage
5. Carton costs 2 cents more each
6. We'll save $800.00 per week and much more in related expenses and insurance, plus goodwill with clients
7. Suggest we scrap the old leftover cartons
8. Can receive new cartons in 10 days
9. Suggest we order 100,000
10. Suggest Mr. Albert's okay for immediate changeover to new carton so that we may order today

Results: Mr. Albert checked with our purchasing and accounting departments, while I waited. They confirmed my figures and judgment. Mr. Albert told me to go ahead with the changeover.

SUCCESS DESTINATION

THE SECRETS OF GOAL SETTING

SUCCESS DESTINATION

THE ART OF GOAL SETTING

Success is the progressive achievement of predetermined, worthwhile, personal goals.

Most successful people will tell you that goal setting has been a major factor in their climb to the top. It is recommended that each of us, regardless of our age or station in life, set goals for a happier future. Each person should have a written plan or statement of their life goals: exactly what you want to accomplish in your life. You are never too young or too old to start establishing your plan.

I know this information to be true, yet for years I was a failure at goal setting. I would use every avoidance technique to keep from setting my goals. It took a major part of my life to discover the reason.

As a small boy, I always wanted to play football with the big boys. One day they got tired of my pleading, so they decided to let me play. They gave me the ball and pointed out my goal. All I had to do was to take the ball to the goal post. I started running, and someone knocked me down; so I got up to run again, and someone knocked me down—again.

I then understood what "dropping the ball" meant: safety. And going for the goal meant that you were going to get knocked down. I wanted no part of this goal stuff—a guy could get hurt that way! As I grew older, I stayed away from goals. When I did set goals, I failed, because I did not understand the guidelines for successful goal setting. I had a "mental block" against goal setting.

The solution, for me anyway, was to change the name from "Goals" to "Success Destinations." Reaching a destination was easy—I did it every day. I could set my destination for my office, leave home, and easily reach my office destination. If in the past you, too, have not had much success in setting goals, you might find it effective to call the process Your Success Destination.

Generally, when we set goals we are entering a new area; something we have not done before. Recall that anything new is most likely outside our comfort zone. When our destination is outside our "known behavior," stress is the result. The mind, in order to avoid this distress, will often set up mental blocks, which keep us within our known behavior pattern; thereby, setting our course for failures—against the very things we desire.

We can identify the problem in a two-fold manner. In order to succeed you will want to:

1. Know the guidelines to setting goals.
2. Be able to convince the inner conscious that it is okay to reach this goal or goals.

TRICKING THE INNER CONSCIOUS

Holographic Innergization is necessary to create a Reel Experience, in order to trick the mind into believing that you have already done the act or goal. When the mind accepts an imagined goal as a reality, you have all the abilities of the mind/brain/body relationship working in harmony to help you accomplish that imagined experience. The mind will help by recalling data and emotions to give you the "right stuff" for success.

Create a Reel Experience for each goal or solution. Use your eye placements to log in the senses: sight, sound, touch, smell, taste, and the emotions of this future event. Pay close attention to the small details, such as background sounds, to make the Reel Experience. Your Holographic Innergization, combined with the Success Destination Guidelines, are the two factors to speed you along toward success in all areas of your life.

GOAL SETTING GUIDELINES

The purpose of goal setting is to provide a structural aid in clarifying your ideas and thoughts; to construct a plan for achieving whatever you desire.

Each step in the goal setting process is explained, and instructions for forms are provided to help you develop a plan of action. Make goal setting a way of life—a continuous process of development and growth that will produce the success you desire. The most important concept is that you develop a habit of setting goals, working toward their achievement, then celebrating your success.

DESIRE

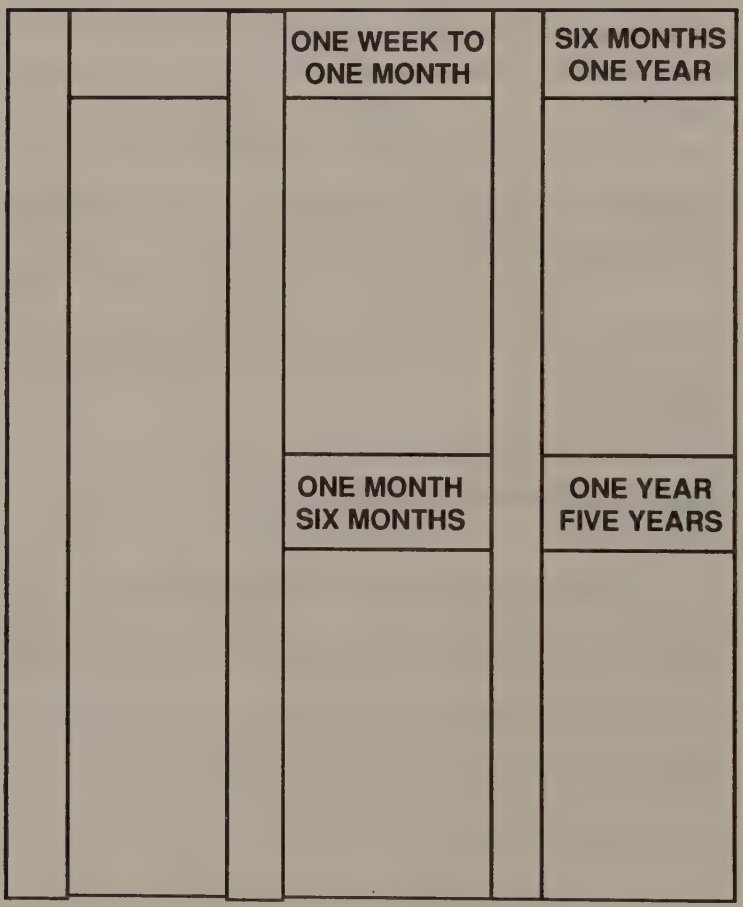

The basic requirement for success is an intense, burning desire to achieve. Without desire, there is no commitment, which is necessary for action. You can create "desire" by writing down what it is you want; reviewing this list frequently; and then, developing a plan of action for achieving it.

Without giving any thought as to how practical your wants are, record your desires on the following list, being completely unrestrained and creative in recording your dreams (goals). Later, as you begin to plan a course of action for achieving these goals, you will decide whether or not the goal is worth pursuing.

SUCCESS DESTINATION LISTING

Take a loose leaf sheet of paper (about 8"x10") and divide as pictured. List your goals. List what you want to have; what you want to accomplish; and what you want to become. List everything from your wildest dreams to your simplest wish.

GOAL SETTING FORM

SUCCESS DESTINATION LISTING

x = Improbable
o = Conflict of interest
 = Out of time/space zone
+ = Need more training or education

You now have a long list of dreams, hopes, desires, and goals. If you were willing to put your life's effort toward nothing other than achieving this list, you probably could accomplish most everything on your list. Many items, however, may be improbable, or would create a conflict of interest with other goals; thus, they may slow you down on your journey to success.

Note: Your goal list has a column on each side: the column on the left is for your "warning flags"; the column on the right is used for prioritizing your goals.

GOAL WARNING FLAGS

There are many possible guidelines in deciding to keep a goal, or eliminating it from your list. The four most important areas are:

1. Improbable, flag x
2. Conflict of interest, flag o
3. Out of time/space zone, flag *
4. Need more training or education, flag +

IMPROBABLE

Go over your list now, and put the flag symbol "x" in the column in front of any goal you believe to be improbable. The object is to eliminate any goal that seems out of the question at this time.

Example: walking on the moon. Although this goal is possible, if your current age is over 65, it is improbable that you will accomplish this goal. Be aware that if this is a goal that you truly desire, you will disregard the "improbable" flag.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Now go over your list, and put the flag symbol "o" in the column in front of any goal that you believe to be a conflict of interest. The object is to eliminate any goal that fights against another goal or situation.

Example: You and your family live happily in Florida, and your goal is to open a business at the North Pole. Your family will probably try to block any move to the North Pole. Be aware that if this is a goal you really desire, you will disregard the "conflict of interest" flag.

OUT OF TIME/SPACE ZONE

Again, go over your list, and put the flag symbol "*" in the column in front of any goal that you believe to be out of your time/space zone. The object is to eliminate any goal that seems out of the question at this time/space zone.

Example: owning the entire United States. This goal might have been accomplished three hundred years ago, but it's really outside the time/space zone probability now. Be aware, if this is a goal you truly desire, you will disregard the "out of time/space" zone.

IN NEED OF MORE TRAINING OR EDUCATION

Finally, go over your list, and put the flag symbol "+" in the column in front of any goal which you believe would take more training or education. The object is to eliminate any goal that would take more time than you are willing to give, in order to get more training or education.

Example: becoming a brain surgeon when you have not finished high school. Are you willing to interrupt your life to invest the many years of schooling involved to accomplish this goal? Be aware, if this is a goal you really desire, you will disregard the "need for more education" flag.

At this point you will have cut down your list of goals considerably. The next step will be to set goal priorities and time frames.

ESTABLISH PRIORITIES

Review your list and assign a priority to each goal. In the column to the right of the goal, number your goals according to their importance to you.

Establishing priorities is critical in assessing which goals are of major importance, and deserving of immediate attention, as well as which goals can wait until a future date.

ESTABLISH TIME FRAMES

Now classify these established priority goals into three categories: long-range, intermediate, and short-term. You will notice that short-term and intermediate goals keep you on the day-to-day path to your ultimate long-range or life goals. They constitute the activities applicable today, and the actions you can take this week. Thus, short-term and intermediate goals move you closer to your ultimate goals.

TRANSFER YOUR UNFLAGGED GOALS

Transfer your unflagged goals (the goals other than the ones marked improbable) to the proper time frame: short-term, intermediate or long-range goals.

TOP PRIORITY SHORT-TERM GOALS

Short-term goals may be anything taking from a day to one month to accomplish.

TOP PRIORITY INTERMEDIATE GOALS

Your intermediate goals may be anything taking from one months to six months to accomplish (usually in the one-year category).

TOP PRIORITY LONG-RANGE GOALS

A long-range goal may be anything taking from six months to one year to a lifetime to accomplish.

TOP PRIORITY FUTURE GOALS

Future goals cover one year to five years and beyond.

SET GOAL ORDER

In the column to the right on each time frame sheet, number your goals in the most obvious order. Look for possible steppingstones—what goal will put you in line for the next goal? What do you expect to accomplish first? What is second . . . ? Make a stepladder out of these goals.

SUCCESS DESTINATIONS

Now that you have listed your goals and have them prioritized, you can begin making an effective plan of action.

1. GOAL STATEMENT: State your goal in a positive manner, and be very specific. Defining your goals in the simplest form will help you identify exactly what it is that you desire. A clear statement is the beginning step toward success.

2. OBSTACLES: List any obstacles that might stand in your way of obtaining your success destination, such as: lack of skills, attitudes or habits, limiting beliefs, family or friends, etc. The first rule in solving any challenge is to make a good study of the problem. Once you have identified the obstacles or road blocks, you can then create a solution.

3. SOLUTIONS: Go to a relaxed level of mind, and use creativity and imagination in planning solutions to overcome each obstacle that you have listed. Recall to ask your mental board members for advice; then, apply the solutions at the Beta or outer conscious level. You will choose to take the necessary steps in making your goals happen. First the thought, then the action!

4. TARGET DATE: Once you have identified and clarified the solutions to overcome those obstacles, set a time as to when you should reach this goal. Set a reasonable date: be good to yourself. Record that date.

Setting a time today gives you an incentive to move ahead. It's best to set a "time frame," not a "time limit." Keep your time frame flexible: it will occasionally take longer than the time set, to reach your goal. If you set a time limit, you might become discouraged if the goal takes longer than you anticipated. Expect to reach your goal on time, and remain able to adjust your time frame if necessary.

5. PERSONAL REWARDS: List all the benefits and personal rewards that you will enjoy once you have reached your destination. If your goal is helping others, think of the personal satisfaction that you will receive from the action. Look for and find a personal reward for each goal. Listing these anticipated benefits, helps you develop the self-motivation and determination necessary to keep your enthusiasm high. You will be better able to stay on course to accomplish your success destination.

6. SET UP A TRIGGER: Decide upon a trigger word, phrase, or action that will remind you of the goal(s) you have set. Program it at Level One. (See the "Trigger Mechanism" Section.) Your trigger(s) will give you constant self-correction.

7. PROGRESS REPORT: Be sure to periodically check your progress on attaining your success destination(s). Determine whether you are on track to meet your goals by the target date set. If not, re-evaluate and adjust the time frame as needed. Break your goals down into steps, so you can easily grasp your progress. When you have achieved your goal, enter the date.

8. SUCCESS DESTINATION FORM: Save your completed Success Destination Form, and review it whenever you need a confidence boost, or added motivation to achieve another goal. When you have achieved your goal, enter the date.

Recreate this form on loose-leaf paper, and keep it in a binder for daily referrals.

SUCCESS DESTINATION FORM

GOAL STATEMENT

_____
_____
_____

OBSTACLES

_____
_____
_____

SOLUTIONS

_____
_____
_____

TARGET DATE

_____

PERSONAL REWARDS

_____

_____

_____

TRIGGER MECHANISMS

_____

_____

_____

PROGRESS REPORT

_____

_____

_____

DATE ACHIEVED

_____

SUMMARY
SUCCESS DESTINATIONS

In order to easily set and achieve your Success Destinations:

1. List the most probable goals that you desire.
2. Prioritize these destinations.
3. Establish time frames (short-term, intermediate, and long-term).

Take each, individual destination and make an effective plan of action:

1. Write a positive goal statement.
2. List any obstacles to overcome.
3. Write possible solutions.
4. Set a target date.
5. List all personal rewards and benefits that you will enjoy.
6. Establish a trigger phrase, word, or action.
7. Keep up to date on your progress in accomplishing the goal.
8. Take note of the actual date when you arrived at the destination.

Go to Level One with the Three to One Method, and discuss each individual goal with your board members, mentally asking for advice. Count out of Level from one to five.

Daily, go to Level One with the Three to One Method. Imagine a Reel Experience incorporating: sight, sound, smell, touch, taste, and emotion. Holographically Innergize each success destination, using action, color, and exaggeration. Keep this mental motion picture alive and ever-expanding with new sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and emotions. Count out of Level One from one to five.

During your work-a-day and play-a-day world, take the necessary actions and steps to accomplish each goal. Be flexible in your time frames. Have fun!!!

SUBJECTIVE PROGRAMMING

SUBJECTIVE PROGRAMMING

Subjective mental communication and programming has long been a controversial topic. To claim state-of-the-art techniques in Mind Mastery, we must examine the potential use of pure mind-to-mind communication, or PSI abilities, as it is called. Let's study some of the research that seems to show that this type of mental programming is not only a possibility, but that it can be extremely effective as well.

Yes, there is proof of PSI abilities.

J.B. RHINE'S RESEARCH

Probably the best-known group of psychic experiments was started in the 1920's by Dr. J.B. Rhine, at The Parapsychology Lab at Duke University in Durham, North Carolina. This controlled research used people from all walks of life to employ their guessing abilities to identify specially designed cards. The "deck" was composed of twenty-five cards, with five of each symbols: stars, wavy lines, circles, squares, and "plus" signs. The two participants in the test were separated by a divider, making chance viewing impossible. The deck was thoroughly shuffled, and the top card was then viewed and concentrated on by the "sender," in an attempt to mentally send the symbol to the "receiver." The receiver would then call out the symbol that came to mind. The process was repeated with the next card, until all twenty-five cards were used. Over the years, in thousands of tests, the receiver would many times, consecutively call out all twenty-five correct. The total results of thirty years of research, the correct answers were unquestionably far above the level of chance. Proving the PSI talents a reality.

REMOTE VIEWING RESEARCH

Research in the early 1970's conducted by Dr. Harold Puthoff and Dr. Russell Targ, as reported in "The Journal of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers," demonstrates the reality of this type of PSI experimentation. The project dealt with "remote viewing"—mentally getting information from a distance.

Physicist Puthoff and laser expert Targ, conducted a series of tests in which they requested one participant, known as the "sender," to go to a secret location. Another member of the test team, called the "receiver," stayed within the laboratory. At a specific time, the receiver was told to relax, to close their eyes, and to imagine what the sender was viewing. The receiver was then told to draw a picture of what they imagined the sender to be seeing. The drawings were amazingly accurate.

Sixty, controlled experiments were conducted with "known" psychics, as well as government scientists, and other officials who happened to be passing through the lab. All were asked to volunteer to act as receivers. Though the experienced psychics did the best, good results were also obtained from most who volunteered in the tests. The results seem to point out that we all have this PSI ability, and this natural gift can be enhanced through practice.

This highly researched project stimulated a grant for further study by the United States Government. The information from this research is still classified "Top Secret" at Stanford Research Institute. It is rumored that the government recently used remote viewing to locate terrorists and to free a kidnapped victim. If this is true, the next step would be to predict an event before it happens, to prevent much bloodshed and unhappiness.

Remote viewing has also been researched by Dr. Marilyn Schitz of The Institute of Parapsychology in Durham, North Carolina and Dr. Robert Jahn of Princeton University, each showing positive results.

You Can Take Part in a Remote Viewing Project.

REMOTE VIEWING
RESEARCH EXPERIMENT

In the Top Of The Mountain Publishing office, in Largo, Florida, there is a special photograph, taken by Dr. Tag Powell, sealed in a manila envelope. Your task will be to depict the subject of the photograph with a drawing. Each year at the American Book Sellers Association's Annual Convention, the sealed photograph will be opened, and compared with the drawings sent in by the readers. All of the results will be made available to the press.

SUPPLIES FOR REMOTE VIEWING PROJECT

You will need: a piece of paper approximately 8x10 inches in size; a black ink pen or felt marker; an envelope larger than the paper, addressed to Top Of The Mountain Publishing, 11701 S. Belcher Road, Suite 123M, Largo, FL 34643, with the words "PSI EXPERIMENT" in large, black letters on the left side of the envelope; also, if you would like the results of these experiments, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HOW TO "SEE" THE PICTURE

Research has shown that best results can be obtained at a relaxed level of mind. So, we recommend that you enter your relaxed level of mind using The Silva Method's Three to One Method, and then use the ten to one countdown, as described in Chapter Two's "Stress and Relaxation" Section. At this relaxed state of mind, imagine yourself sensing, seeing, or feeling the sealed photo the publisher's office. Usually the first impression is the best one, so as soon as you get an impression or idea, open your eyes, and use your black pen to draw your feelings or impressions. You may draw abstract lines, specific shapes, or you may do a detailed drawing. We are not concerned with your artistic ability, we are asking for a symbol, feeling, or idea that you think may represent the photograph. Be sure to write down the date, sign your name, and print your name and address on the front of your drawing.

Since the results of this project will be available to the news media, we will assume that all signed drawings will give us your permission to use the drawing and your name in any connection with this book and\or the Remote Viewing Research Project. Please state in writing, if for any reason, you would like us to use your drawing and withhold your name.

Your drawing must be received in the Top Of The Mountain Publishing office by April 15 of each year, to be included in the research for that year. A new photograph will be in a sealed envelope by June 15 of each year.

Remember to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, if you would like us to send you the results of the Remote Viewing Project.

PSI AND PROFIT IN THE SILVER MARKET

Recently, to further prove the practicality of Subjective Programming, Dr. Targ joined with psychologist Keith Harary and art investor Anthony White, to form Delphi Associates, California. Delphi's goal is to successfully invest in their PSI abilities by predicting silver prices. Harary, acting as the receiver or "psychic," made nine correct predictions in a row, the odds of this happening by chance "is one in fifty thousand." These sessions created an actual net profit of $120,000 for the group.

In the Summer of 1987, Russell Targ, now working as a full-time laser researcher with Lockheed, ran another project in silver predictions. Out of fifty-two predictions about the silver market, thirty-five predictions were correct. The profit on this experiment was not reported.

PSI AND DREAMS

Another exciting research project was conducted at Maimonides Medical Center in Brooklyn, New York. The Maimonides Medical Center Dream Lab is the home of much of the famous dream research supervised by Dr. Stanley Krippner.

A New York psychologist, Dr. Montague Ullman, felt that when working with dream analysis, some of the patients were relating the doctor's personal thoughts and actions in their dreams. Dr. Ullman, working with Dr. Krippner at the Dream Lab, was able to conduct a series of experiments that lead us to believe that we are easily (mentally) influenced during our dream state.

Three rooms were set up for the experiments. The first room had a bed and monitoring equipment; such as a microphone, a speaker, an EEG brain-wave sensor, a respiratory rate sensor, and eye sensors to measure rapid eye movement (REM) of the sleeping subject. Room two had the control equipment where the scientists were able to monitor and record the results of each experiment. Room three was a specially constructed, soundproof room with a filing cabinet, containing many, classic works of art sealed in manila envelopes; a table, a chair'; and a signaling devise, similar to a door bell. The setup of the rooms, as well as all the tests, were conducted with strict scientific protocol.

The "receiver," in room one, after being connected to the monitoring equipment, was allowed to relax in bed, and asked to go to natural sleep. While the "receiver-sleeper" was entering the sleep levels, the "sender" entered room three, sat down and relaxed, awaiting a signal from the scientists. As the receiver-sleeper entered the dream state, changes were noted by the scientists: respiratory rate; brainwave patterns, entering the Alpha Level between 7 and 14 cycles per second; and rapid eye movement. The signal was sounded for the sender in room three, to open the filing cabinet, and randomly select a sealed, manila envelope. The sender then returned to the chair, opened the envelope, removed the picture, then mentally projected the image to the receiver-sleeper.

(At the beginning of these experiments, no one was sure of how to project these images. The sender tried to imagine sending the picture by becoming emotionally involved in the content of the picture, and then pretending to send the emotional feeling and the picture. Later tests showed that pictures invoking a specific, strong, emotional feeling, such as elation or sorrow, were easier to receive.)

The sender kept projecting to the receiver-sleeper until the second signal was sounded. At that time, the sender would relax, and wait for next signal. The second signal was sounded when the receiver sleeper finished that dream cycle, noted by the scientists in changes of respiratory rate, brainwave pattern, and decreased rapid eye movement.

Through the microphone, the receiver-sleeper was then awakened, asked to verbally recall the dream so that the dream could recorded on a tape recorder. After finishing the dream recollection, the receiver-sleeper was allowed to return to sleep. The process was then repeated: dreaming, the sending of the picture, and recording of the dream.

At the end of each week, all of the original pictures, and the transcripts of the dreams were presented to a group of impartial judges. The judges were able to match the correct pictures with the correct dreams, on an average of seven out of ten times. These successful experiments continued for over five years. Much of this research was reported in a book, published by Penguin Press, Dream Telepathy by Drs. Krippner and Ullman.

CRITICS AND FRAUDS

Years of this type of controlled, scientific testing should convince even the most critical skeptic. Yet, many still believe that there is no proof of the psychic phenomenon.

Why is there so much rejection of our PSI abilities? Let us explore some of the possible reasons for this rejection.

THE POWER OF THE NEWS

There has been much negative newspaper, magazine, radio, and television publicity about psychics and their tricks, and frauds. Of course, some of this information is correct, for in every group there are some unethical people who cheat and take advantage of the uninformed. The fast-growing New Age Community probably has more than their share of frauds. The honest are often grouped with the cheats, and what's even sadder is that the cheats are grouped with the honest. It is pathetic to state that our news reporters are sometimes biased, and are often misinformed about the true psychic research.

There are those reporters who follow the line of least resistance, by taking the word of an "authority." As an example: American TV and press has given much publicity to an aging magician, who claims no one has demonstrated true psychic ability, because he is able to produce similar results through tricks. Even though this expose' is just a scheme to get this magician's name in the media, it's sad to say, a particular well-meaning group recently gave this trickster a grant for hundreds of thousands of dollars to prove that psychics are frauds. With that amount of funding, the public can expect another bunch of flashy expose's in the news media.

BIASED REPORTING

In some cases, the media creates the deception. It was recently reported that a science-writer for "Scientific America" magazine, criticized a US Government, NASA-supported PSI project. He falsely alleged that, "The subjects in the experiments tore up their unsuccessful data tapes, and only handed in the successful data tapes." He later confided to a fellow reporter that he had just made up the accusation because, "That's the way it must have happened." He was invited to discuss his accusations in a public debate, but he declined, admitting he really didn't know enough about PSI experimentation, and wasn't up-to-date on the subject.

PSI COPS CAUGHT IN FRAUD

Another group of organized critics, "Scientific Investigation of the Claims of the Paranormal" called PSI-COPS, supposedly formed to protect us from PSI fraud, was caught trying to change the statistics to negative results, when their research showed unexpected, positive PSI results. They were exposed when a member of their group defected, and offered documented proof of the deception to the press.

Another ex-PSI-COP revealed how two members of the PSI-COP'S team tried to wreck the PSI experiments at Washington University's McDonnell Research Lab. These two tried to discredit the research by posing as psychics, and deceiving the researchers at every opportunity. PSI-COP'S team members were misled to believe that if they could fool the scientists, then all PSI research was invalid.

This will give you an idea of the type of fraud and deceit that some people and/or organizations will go to, to discredit honest psychic research.

A CHANGE IN THE MEDIA'S ATTITUDE

As of late, we have noticed a change in the media's reports of the PSI world; the reporting seems to be more objective. Perhaps this is showing a shift in the PSI consciousness of the world. At least we have seen a worldwide interest in the explorations of actress Shirley McLaine, and a great rise in the sales of New Age books and audiocassettes. It may be the new era of opening the mind to its' real abilities.

PSI AND RELIGION

We know some organized religions won't encourage PSI abilities, perhaps because these talents are too much like miracles. And precognition (predicting things that will happen in the future) may be too close to prophecy. This brings to mind one of the interesting episodes from Myan History. The labor-saving discovery of the wheel was well-known, and in use by the High Priests of the Myan culture, however, it was a "sin" for the common Myan to use the the wheel, and of course was forbidden. It is thought, the Myan Priests feared that the wheel would allow the common Myan to travel; and thereby, they would lose control over the masses. It is not known why, but the Myan culture did seem to just disappear, the cities were left empty, as if everyone left at one time.

PSI AND BIG BUSINESS

The use of PSI Subjective Programming in business has been a closely guarded secret of top executives. Articles have recently appeared in the "New York Times," "Wall Street Journal," and the "U.S. News and World Report," showing that many of the Fortune 500 Companies are using subjective information.

HOW YOU CAN USE PSI SUBJECTIVE PROGRAMMING

Graduates report that The Silva Method's Subjective Programming Technique has been successful with:

* Starting loved ones on the road to recovery from drugs, and\or alcohol.
* Bringing the life back into waning marriages.
* Enjoying new, happy, personal and business relationships.
* Finding a perfect mate or friend.
* Locating a new business partner or investor.
* A Florida business person used this Technique to successfully supplement his income with a hobby.
* A Californian used this Programming to successfully launch a new business.
* A company in Cleveland, Ohio, used the Technique to quadruple their business in just one month.

* These are but a few examples of how people around the world have successfully used The Silva Subjective Programming Technique. Use your own mind to create new solutions, in order to better your life.

Our Technique for Subjective Programming came from the research of Jose' Silva. His early research was originally conducted with children. Dr. Silva felt that there was a mental bond or communication between a mother and her child. His further research convinced him that there was also a link between the father and child. The Program was originally designed to stop thumb sucking and bed wetting. This adaptation is still taught in the Silva Basic Lecture Series. After Dr. Silva completed the tests, he was convinced that we can mentally communicate with each other, and not just between family members. Jose' believes that it is necessary to have a caring or understanding attitude toward the person with whom you choose for mental communication.

SUBJECTIVE PROGRAMMING TECHNIQUE

At night, just before going to sleep, enter your relaxed level of mind and body with the Three to One Method. (See the end of Chapter Two for the complete script.)

At this relaxed level of mind and body, mentally tell yourself the following program:

"I will awaken when [insert name(s) of person(s)] is (are) having their last dream, or is most open to programming. I will awaken, and I will recall why I have awakened."

Then go to sleep from Level One.

You will awaken during the night or in the morning.

At that time, close your eyes and program the person(s) ["subject(s)"] with a "positive program."

After you have finished programming (between one to fifteen minutes), go back to sleep until your desired time to awaken in the morning.

You will most likely awaken during the night to execute your program. If you do not awaken the first time you use this Technique, do not become discouraged. Simply continue each night until you do awaken to program your subject.

A "positive program" means that you will choose to mentally state, to your subject, the objective in a positive manner. You will want positive expressions in your program. Avoid words like stop, don't, and never. The idea is to program for what you want, and stay away from what you don't want. Use positive command phrases. Visualize or Innergize a Reel Experience, as you are mentally saying your program.

WRONG WAY: "STOP yelling at the kids!"

RIGHT WAY: "You will become more helpful and caring toward the children."

You will find it most effective to write out your positive program in advance, before you go to sleep. Keep it at your bedside so you can refer to it if necessary.

The phrase "loved one" deals with the caring of another human being; including, but not limited to, your family members. This is most effective when you have put the "caring" back into your personal and business lives.

RIP-OFF THE WORLD?

Subjective Programming is so powerful, many might become concerned with this Program falling into the wrong hands. One of the really interesting things about Subjective Programming is that it can only be used for good. This Technique will not work to persuade another in a manner that is not good for, or will cause harm to, or discomfort to others.

If you are selling a product that is a rip-off; that is, having little or no value to the consumer, using this Technique will decrease sales. Subjective Programming, when used in a just and fair manner, will be a quick tool to help you toward a new and satisfying, happy future.

HOW FAST DOES IT WORK?

Most users report that Subjective Programming works in one application. If you do not get your desired results, ask yourself: "Is my program entirely positive? Is it of benefit to all parties concerned?" Make any changes to correct your program, and use the corrected version the next night. Continue to use it each night until you get results. It will work quickly.

MENTAL ADVERTISING

Change the above program to fit your business needs. Revise the program to say: "I will awaken when the largest number of people, who are in need of my services or product, are having their last dream, or are most open to programming. I will awaken, and I will understand why I have awakened."

When you awaken, at night or in the morning, close your eyes and conduct your "mental broadcasting." Example: "This is John Doe of the Careful Carpet Cleaning Company. We clean carpets with care, and do the finest job in town. You can find our ad in the Yellow Pages under 'carpet cleaning.' You will remember the name, Careful Carpet Cleaning, at 2930 54th Avenue North, St. Petersburg. I will be looking forward to your call. You will appreciate our fine, careful service. Remember, Careful Carpet Cleaning."

Note: As in all successful advertising, repeat the name of the company and/or product three times. You can improve the effectiveness of this programming by using Holographic Innergization to create the Reel Experience, when doing your mental broadcasting.

MENTAL PERSUASION IDEAS

I will awaken when my son...
I will awaken when my husband...
I will awaken when my perfect mate...

I will awaken when my client, Susie Smith...
I will awaken when my boss, Sam Spade...
I will awaken when my employee, Don Dodge...
I will awaken when...

You will now be able to use these Techniques in a diversified manner to improve relationships with difficult people, and to mentally advertising your product or services. There is really no limit to the many, fast and easy changes you can use with The Silva Method's Subjective Programming Technique. Because the general use of the PSI Techniques are still being researched, we would really like to hear about your experiences with these Methods. Please send us a note describing your personal use and outcome of this Subjective Programming Technique

With this Technique at your command, you will open a new world of better communication and persuasion skills.

ALPHA BOARDROOM AND CREATIVE PROBLEM SOLVING

ALPHA BOARDROOM AND CREATIVE PROBLEM SOLVING

IS IT A PROBLEM OR A SOAP OPERA?

People get problems confused with soap operas. In fact, for some people, their entire lives are soap operas. Every event in their lives are hassles: every word, every action, and every person is analyzed. This type of person is probably insecure; and feels that the world is there just to make them unhappy, or to pull something over on them.

Ask yourself: "Is it a real problem?"

ARE YOU SHADOW BOXING

Some people spend time on nonexistent problems, or problems that have not yet called out for an answer. Are you locked in the world of "WHAT IF?" Do you look for answers to problems that could solve themselves? Many problems will disappear before you need to make a decision. You, like Orson Wells, would not drink a wine before it's time, so don't waste time solving a problem before it's time.

Ask yourself: "Do I need to solve this problem now?"

IS YOUR PROBLEM A STOP SIGN OR A GUIDELINE?

There are those, that when confronted with a problem, fold up their tent and go home, they fall apart; get uptight. These people look at each problem as another excuse for failure. You will often see their success or failure in their health condition.

Dr. Hans Selye, in his book Stress without Distress, says that, "We will always have problems. These problems can be used to keep us young and alive." As long as we look upon a problem as a challenge or an adventure, we can expect to be healthy.It's when we look at the problem as the end of the world that trouble begins. We need to look at each problem as another experience to learn to become more successful. Remember, Edison said he had had five thousand "learning experiences" in developing the light bulb: five thousand steps to success.

Ask yourself: "How can I turn this problem into a valuable experience?"

A LOOK TO THE STARS

Look upon your problems as having as many solutions as there are stars in the sky. Napoleon Hill said, "The greatest cause of failure is stopping after one defeat. The truly successful person meets defeat by picking up and trying a new plan, time and time again, until victory is met."

Look upon the problem as having many successful solutions. See how many ideas you can come up with to solve the former, stumbling block. Free your thinking, write down all the possible answers: in fact, write down the impossible answers.

When the top level executives are in a "brainstorming" session, all ideas are suggested, even the silly ideas, this keeps the ideas flowing with fun and excitement. And always change the problem to a project. Use the project to stimulate your thinking, not to stop your creative ideas. Ask not what your project can do to you , but what you can do to your project! How can this project improve your finances, your relationships, and your life.

Use the "Alpha Boardroom Technique" to find new solutions.

THE ALPHA BOARDROOM

Have you ever noticed how some corporations' stationery letterheads have a listing of their board of advisors. How would you like to have a panel of experts to help you with decision-making? The concept you are about to use was developed by a self-made millionaire, the steel king, Andrew Carnegie. His "Master Mind Board" was reported, and made famous in Dr. Napoleon Hill's great, classic book, Think and Grow Rich. Dr. Hill used the Master Mind Boardroom with exciting success.

Imagine a very special board of advisors, the top men and women in any field you desire; create this imaginary Board in such detail, that you can hold discussions, seek advice, and solve problems. This concept is easily said, but not easily done from Napoleon Hill's instructions. Many have tried, but only a few have created a working Master Mind

Board.

Today, fifty years later, we have the tools of modern research, and the classic Silva Method Mental Training Exercise to help us enjoy creating, using the Carnegie idea. Because we create and use our "Board" at the Alpha Level of mind, we renamed the it "Alpha Boardroom."

The Alpha Boardroom is created by going to Level One: visualize or pretend six advisors of your choice. These may be people living, or those who have passed on. You will enjoy pretending to joke and chat with the great ones of any field you desire.

Psychologists tell us that we very often have the answer to our problems, but since we are so emotionally involved, we can't find the solutions. When you are "talking" to one or more of your board members at Level, you can become more objective about the situation, freeing yourself from emotional involvement.

ENTERING YOUR ALPHA BOARDROOM

Your standard method for entering your Boardroom is as follows:

Enter Level One with the Three to One Method. At Level One, imagine an "Alphavator": a very plush elevator-type compartment, with a comfortable chair in the center. Mentally enter the Alphavator and sit in the chair. You will notice two unusual things about your Alphavator—the Alphavator door slides down into the floor, and the floor numbers are reversed: the first floor is truly the first floor of the building—the top floor. Visualize the numbers as they light up . . . ten, nine, eight, descending to one. At one, the door opens and you will enter your "Boardroom."

Use your imagination to construct the Boardroom—the Board's tables and chairs, and of course, your personal chairperson's chair. Create a special mental room for you, design this room with any special equipment you desire. Some individuals enjoy items like computers, ticker tapes, and giant screen TV's; along with a sofa, chairs, tables, a desk, and a bar area.

Now bring your board members into your Boardroom. Decide who you would like to have sitting in all six, empty chairs around the board table. They can be anyone you desire—famous people of the past, present, or future; people from fiction, acquaintances, or made-up composites of several people.

Some suggestions for board members might be: Jose' Silva, Lee Iacocca, Ronald Reagan, Martin Luther King, Og Mandino, Napoleon Hill, Ben Franklin, Golda Meir, Madam Curie, Judith L. Powell, Queen Elizabeth II, F. Lee Bailey, Abraham Lincoln, Dr. Tag Powell, George Washington Carver, Susan B. Anthony, or Gloria Steinem. The choice is almost endless. You might choose someone in the advertising field, like David Olgilvy, or even the top person in your competitive circle, who would give you a "competitive edge." Many people like to bring in close family members or friends—it's your choice.

Your board members will arrive two at a time in the Alphavator. After all six have been seated, seat yourself in your chair, and greet your Board, then you might want to take time to thank your "Higher Power" for allowing the board meeting. . . . From then on, your advisors will be ready and waiting for you in the Boardroom.

Select a current problem or challenge, and state the question to the Board. Ask the board member to your right for the solution. Take a deep breath, and exhale slowly as you clear your mind, then think of the answer from your advisor to the right. You may feel as though you are making it all up: this is the correct feeling.

Repeat this process, proceeding around the table, until you have several, prospective solutions. Some ideas may sound silly, however don't overlook them, often these will springboard you and your board members to other ideas.

After you have heard from all six members, compare the solutions. Which seem to be the best solution for your business or personal life? You will often get an answer which will save you time and money.

Use your Board for "Mental Brainstorming" sessions. Toss out ideas to the Board, and have them give you details on: finances, marketing, time management, production, and personnel, as well as family and personal relationships.

Any time you need a sounding board, you know where to go—to your "Boardroom Level." Ask how the Board feels about your decisions. Be creative, ask each one for answers, if they do not volunteer information.

After receiving your answers, individually thank your board members, and count out of Level, one to five.

Be sure to write down ALL of their ideas, especially ideas from board members that might be your true competitors. You might be surprised to see some of the rejected, mental ideas show up in the news as actually having been sponsored by those competitors.

You will receive unlimited ideas from your board members, for creative decision making in all areas of your life.

DECISION MAKING WITH BEN FRANKLIN

For a final note on decision making, we must enclose an updated version of the old standby, "The Ben Franklin." This decision-making Technique is often used by salespeople for closing a sale, and can also be used for your personal decision-making process.

First, draw a line down the middle of a large sheet of paper. On one side of the line, write "FOR," and on the other side, write "AGAINST." Then list all the pros and cons concerning the decision. After you have listed all the pros and cons, it's easy to see which is the best decision to make—the one with more pros than cons.

The only drawback to this Technique is that it is almost 100% left brain, analytical thinking. The right, creative, intuitive brain has no say in the decision. Using the Alpha Boardroom, we can improve the Ben Franklin Technique.

THE BEN ALPHA TECHNIQUE

Start with a blank piece of paper, and draw a line down the middle with "FOR" and "AGAINST" written, one on either side.

Enter Level One with the Three to One Method, at Level One, enter the Alpha Boardroom, and take your place in the chairperson's chair. At this point, call in the two, great debators: two of your board members who have been the most verbal in past discussions.

Now assign the "pro" side to one person, and the "con" side to the other. Give each board member a short time to make their basic points. Using your Thumbnail Technique to stay relaxed, open your eyes, and write down their pro and con answers.

Go to a deeper level by closing your eyes again, taking a deep breath and exhaling slowly. No need to count down, as you are still at Level. Again, ask your two experts to give any last thoughts. Open your eyes, and write down the answers. (If necessary, you may repeat the process until your two, great debators have exhausted all the pros and cons for that particular problem.) Count out of Level, one to five.

Tally up the pros and cons. From this data, you will have an answer that contains the left brain's analytical thoughts, and the right brain's creative, intuitive ideas as well.

This Ben Alpha Technique opens the world of balanced, creative, and analytical problem solving that is not only useful, but interesting as well.

SUMMARY
ALPHA BOARDROOM

Using the mental board of advisors at your Boardroom Level, can be as much fun as it is helpful in the decision-making process, for business and/or personal gain. You will enjoy expanding the depths of your advisor's personalities, by reading their biographies or autobiographies. Your public library should have a wealth of information on some of your board members. The Alpha Boardroom is a marvelous exercise to expand imagination, creativity, visualization, and Innergization. Enjoy it!

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Bagley, Dan S.,III and Edward J. Reese. Beyond Selling. Meta Publications. Southern Institute of NLP, Box 529T, Indian Rocks Beach, Florida 34635

Bernd, Ed, Jr. Relax It's Good For You. Institue of Psychorientology, P.O. Box 2249, Laredo, TX 78040-2249

Bower, Dr. Gordon H. Bower. "Emotion and Cognition." Stanford University. Proceedings of the Third Mexican Congress of Psychology.

Brown, Barbara, Ph.D. New Mind, New Body. Harper & Row Publishers Inc.

Clark, Glenn. The Man Who Tapped the Secrets of the Universe. Walter Russell. The University of Science & Philosophy.

Corbett, Margaret. Help Yourself to Better Sight. Wilshire Book Co., California.

Diamond, Dr. John. BK-Behavioral Kinesiology. Harper & Row Publishers Inc.

Ferguson, Marilyn. Aquarian Conspiracy. P.O. Box 42211, Los Angeles, CA 90042.

Friedman, Meyer M.D. and Ray Roseman, M.D. Type A Behavior and Your Heart. Borzoi Books.

Gawain, Shakti. Creative Visualization. DeVorss & Co. Marina Del Rey, Calif

Golas, Thaddeus. The Lazy Man's Guide to Enlightenment. DeVorss and Co. Marina Del Rey, Calif

Health, Education and Welfare, U.S. Department of Research on Sleep and Dreams. U.S. Government.

King, Serge. Imagineering for Health. The Theosophical Publishing House.

Krippner, Dr. Stanley and Dr. Montague Ullman. Dream Telepathy. Penguin Press.

Malloy, John T. NEW Dress for Success for Men. Warner Books.

Malloy, John T.Live for Success. Morrow & Co.

Malloy, John T. Women's Dress for Success. Warner Books.

Maltz, Maxwell, M.B., F.I.C.S. Psycho Cybernetics. Wilshire Book Co.

Murphy, Dr. Joseph. The Power of Your Subconscious Mind. Prentice-Hall Inc.

Nierenberg, Gerald I. and Henry H. Calero. How to Read a Person Like a Book.

O'Hanlon, William Hudson.Taproots, Underlying Principals of Milton Erickson's Therapy and Hypnosis. W.W. Norton & Company, Inc. Susan T. Barrows, 500 Fifth Avenue, NY,NY 10110

Ostrandser, Sheila and Lynn Schroeder. Super Learning. Dell Publishing Co.

Peale, Norman Vincent. Dynamic Imaging. Fleming H. Revell Co.

Percival. Thinking and Destiny. The Word Foundation.

Powell, Tag, Ph.D. As You Thinketh. Top Of The Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Powell, Tag, Ph.D. Money and You. Top Of The Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Reese, Reese, and Siudzinski. Metateaching and Learning. Southern Institute Press, Inc. Southern Institute of NLP, Box 529T, Indian Rocks Beach Florida 34635

Reese, Maryann and Carol Lynn Yancar.Practitioner Manual for Introductory Patterns of Neuro-Linguistic Programming .Southern Institute Press, Inc. Southern Institute of NLP, Box 529T, Indian Rocks Beach Florida 34635

Selye, Hans, M.D. Stress Without Distress. Signet Books.

Silva, Jose.*I Have a Hunch, Vol 1 & 2.*Institute of Psychorientology. P.O. Box 2249, Laredo, TX 78040-2249

Silva, Jose and Ed Bernd, Jr.Subjective Communication. Institute of Psychorientology, P.O. Box 2249, Laredo, TX 78040-2249

Silva, Jose and Philip Miele. The Silva Mind Control Method. Simon & Schuster Pocket Book Co. N.Y.C.

Silva, Jose and Robert Stone, Ph.D. Man the Healer. Institute of Psychorientology, P.O. Box 2249, Laredo, TX 78040-2249

Silva, Jose and Robert Stone, Ph.D. The Silva Mind Control Method for Business Managers. Simon & Schuster Pocket Book Co. N.Y.C.

Silva, Silva, and Bernd. Questions and Answers About The Silva Method. Institute of Psychorientology, P.O. Box 2249, Laredo, TX 78040-2249

Simonton, O. Carl, M.D. Getting Well Again. St. Martins Press.

Spalding, Baird. Life and Teaching of the Masters of the Far East. DeVorss & Co. Marina Del Rey, Calif

Steadman, Alice S. Who's the Matter With Me. DeVorss & Co. Marina Del Rey, Calif

Toffler, Alvin. Future Shock. Random House.

TAPE CASSETTES AND KITS

Powell, Judith L. "Color Dynamics." Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Powell, Judith L. "Discover Your Perfect Mate." Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Powell, Dr. Tag. "Instant Money." Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Powell, Dr. Tag. "Secrets of Visualizatioin." Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Powell, Dr. Tag. "Silva Method of Mind Mastery Seminar Tape Library." (Eight cassette tapes). Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Powell, Dr. Tag. "Silva Relaxation Exercise." Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Powell, Dr. Tag. "Speed Learning Action Kit." Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123, Largo, Florida 34643.

Sutphen, Trenna. "One to Grow on Series." (Self-Responsibility Stories for Children) Trenna Productions. P.O. Box 2484T, Malibu, CA 90265

PERIODICALS

"Brain/Mind Bulletin." P.O. Box 42211, Los Angeles, CA 90042. Report the state-of-the-art in mind\brain research.

"SKY—Delta In-Flight Magazine." Articles by Perry Buffington, Ph.D. Exellent articles on the positive use of the brain\mind in business and personal success.

"The Journal of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers."

"Omni Magazine." Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 908, Farmingdale, NY 11737. Ongoing reporting on the mind\body relationship.

"RAPPORTER—Journal of Human Performance Technologies," A magazine on the cutting edge of the new technologies, broadrange from NLP to reincarnation. $25.00 year, P.O. Box 202T, Sunland, CA 91040

Silva Method Newsletter, Ed Bernd Jr. editor, $20.00 two years. P.O. Box 2249, Laredo, TX 78044-2249

"U.S. News & World Report," February 9, 1987.

NEW AGE MUSIC

Abood, Peter and Dr. Tag Powell. "Tuning the Rainbow". Soft relaxing music that triggers a feeling of Peace, Love, and Security. Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123M, Largo, Florida 34643.

Abood, Peter and Dr. Tag Powell. "Charging the Body Electric". Soft relaxing music that triggers a feeling of Strength, Pride, Courage and Selfconfidence. Top of the Mountain Publishing. 11701 Belcher Road So., Suite 123M, Largo, Florida 34643.

If there was a book with the latest scientific breakthroughs giving you tools to live a better, healthier, happier and more confident future, you would certainly want that book, wouldn't you.

The Silva Method of Mind Mastery has the techniques that have been used successfully worldwide to quickly improve communication, become more persuasive, and to enrich relationships. The breakthrough "Holographic Visualization" is the first new aid to heightening visualization. Many people who have never been able to use the power of imagining their goals, visualize for the first time using this Technique. New research from the top universities give us an exciting way to defeat depression and lack of confidence.

This is a How-to, Self-Improvement book that takes you step-by-step into using the very latest, exciting scientific techniques for not only helping yourself, but how to enrich the lives of friends, relatives, and associates, as well.

Here are only a few of the areas and techniques you will learn...

* Master Secrets to Improve Communication
* Instant Stress Reduction and Relaxation
* Holographic Visualization and Innergization
* Instant Attitude Adjustment
* Defeat the Blue Funk Monster of Depression
* Magic Triggers of the Mind
* Alpha Time Management
* Subjective Programming
* Master Mind Boardroom for Decision Making
* Secrets of Goal Setting
* Holographic Goal Setting

The Silva Method has been used successfully by millions worldwide. It is now time for you to make exciting, easy changes for a better quality of life.

I congratulate Tag and Judi Powell for authoring the Silva Method of Mind Mastery . This book explains the advances in Brain/Mind relations that opens a world of new and exciting possibilities that anyone can use for their benefit.

This book can serve as an introduction to the "Silva Method of Mind Development and Stress Control." Read this book and I am sure that you will start to change your life for the better. Jose Silva

Founder of the Silva Method

